More Marines Hit Viet Nam Beaches For Added Power

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Some 4,000 U.S. Marines landed in South Viet Nam this weekend, boosting to more than 86,000 the rolls of the American armed forces in the country. President Johnson has ordered a buildup toward a total of 125,000.

About 1,200 Marines came ashore in Da Nang on this morning, following landing of 2,800 Leathernecks on Saturday at the Marine complex at Chu Lai, 52 miles south of Da Nang. Sunday's arrivals were members of the 3rd Battalion, 9th Marine Regiment, 3rd Division, formerly based at Okinawa.

On the war front, Vietnamese military authoriites reported 36 Viet Cong killed in a clash with government forces Saturday in Xan Xuyen Province in the southernmost part of the country, a U.S. military spokesman said.

Weapons Captured

The Vietnamese reported no government casualties, he said, and the Viet Cong toll was said to have been confirmed by body count. A large number of Viet Cong weapons also were reported captured.

Government troops Saturday mounted an offensive against the Viet Cong near North Viet Nam's doorstep, swiftly following up a raid only 17 miles from the Communist border by a fleet of U.S. B52 jet bombers.

Four U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs staged a leaflet-dropping mission and four others conducted bombing runs over North Viet Nam, whose gunners downed five U.S. Navy planes Friday. Briefing officers said all the Thunderchiefs returned safely.

American Marine patrols operating out of Da Nang, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, killed three Viet Cong and wounded 20 without suffering any casualties, a Marine spokesman said. He reported a guerrilla mortar and small arms cache were seized in Elephant Valley, 12 miles northwest of Da Nang.

Targets of the eight-engine B52s on their eighth Strategic Air Command mission over South Viet Nam were the stamping grounds of two Viet Cong battalions — perhaps up to 1,000 men — in Ba Long Valley, 90 miles northwest of the Da Nang.

Military sources at Da Nang said the Vietnamese troops who followed up the raid killed 14 Viet Cong in the initial phase of their offensive, one of the largest ever staged in the 1st Army area abutting the border.

There was no immediate report on results of the B52 strikes. Even details as to the number of planes and the total of bombs dropped were withheld. A briefing officer said a new directive has made this information classified material.

Official announcements concerning previous strikes by the B52s, the first of which was launched from Guam June 18, indicated from 25 to 30 took part and the bomb load was about 500 tons in each case.

In the absence of confirmed Viet Cong casualties, spokesmen have referred to the B52 raids as harassment operations to disrupt known centers of enemy activity.

Of the five Navy planes shot down Friday, Radio Hanoi broadcast a report that one was felled by militia rifle fire.

The toll was the greatest since the loss of six U.S. Air Force planes July 27, the day of a raid on two surface-to-air missile sites 40 miles northwest of Hanoi.

A briefing officer discounted the idea that North Vietnamese antiaircraft gunners are changing tactics, but said they "may be getting more accurate."

Saigon announcements have told of the loss of 77 planes in the air campaign against North Viet Nam. Radio Hanoi claims the total is 472.

Papandreou's Hold Slips In Greek Crisis

ATHENS (UPI) — Greek political leaders who abandoned ousted Premier George Papandreou in his fight to regain power said Saturday they have enough support to form a new government and end the month-old crisis.

The turncoats, members of Papandreou's Center Union party, indicated a new party might be formed.

A spokesman for Stephen Stefanopoulos, deputy premier in the Papandreou government and veteran Socialist leader Elias Tsirimokos, said after a two-day meeting with their followers they had enough support "for a majority" in a parliament confidence vote.

Turning Point

They broke with Papandreou over his adamant position that King Constantine either reappoint him premier or call for new elections. The king fired Papandreou in a policy dispute July 15. Saturday's action could be the turning point in the bitter and chaotic crisis.

The spokesman would not say how many Center Union deputies agreed to join the Stefanopoulos-Tsirimokos bloc. A bare majority of 151 votes is needed to pass a confidence vote in the 300-member parliament.

There are "more than 25" members of the new group, 24 Center Union backers of George Athanassiadis-Novas and 99 members of the right wing party for a total of 148. Athanassiadis-Novas was appointed to succeed Papandreou but his government fell in a no-confidence vote.

The new group apparently has the support of other Center Union deputies and possibly the eight-member Progressive party delegation to announce it could win a vote of confidence.

It appeared that Stefanopoulos has the inside track toward becoming premier.

Such a result would be a devastating blow to the 77-year-old Papandreou. It was considered certain he will try to take his case directly to the people.

There have been almost nightly pro - Papandreou demonstrations, two of which exploded into riots last month that left one man dead and hundreds injured.

Soviet Probe Takes 'Good' Moon Photos

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Saturday it has photographed the moon again from a space probe, this time relatively close up, and said much new detail was disclosed.

A Soviet scientist said the new pictures would permit mapping the whole of the moon, front and back.

None Made Public

The photographs were not immediately made public. They have been held up two weeks since they were called in from a space probe that closed in on the moon with cameras functioning. Official photo agencies here said they would be released this week.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported the photographs were taken July 20 from a distance ranging from 7,200 to 6,500 miles, about the distance at which America's Mariner 4 photographed Mars.

The pictures were taken as the vehicle approached the moon a slight distance to one side. That permitted pictures not only of a part of the moon hidden from the earth, but part of the side normally seen on romantic June nights. Features of the moon showed up with shadows caused by sidelighting from the sun that helped outline their nature, Tass said.

The vehicle which took the pictures traveled on another nine days, until July 29, before the signal was given to transmit the pictures to earth. The pictures were taken by Zond 3, which was launched July 18 without any announcement of the purpose of the launching.

Apparently the Soviet scientists were not taking a chance on another unhappy affair such as that of Zond 2. That ship started off with the announced intention of photographing Mars, lost battery power and were silent while an American space vehicle whistled along through the cosmos to make Mars pictures and send them back.

Tass told this story:

For an hour and eight minutes Zond 3 sailed by the moon, its cameras locked on the lunar surface taking an unannounced number of television pictures. Then it sailed on beyond to a favorable position for transmitting them to earth.

This began when the ship was 1,368,000 miles from the earth, more than four times as far away as the moon. Since then the machine has transmitted during 38 periods.

Rivers Wants Gun Diplomacy

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., said here Saturday, "We can beat anybody on earth. What are we waiting for in Viet Nam?"

Rivers, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, added: "We have Americans in this battle of survival and I want to save as many of them as I can. This is no checkers game.

"We can't exchange American boys for Chinese. We have the capacity to live big. Let's get the winning plans out of the cupboard and let's win."

Rivers urged taking the war to Red China if the Chinese enter the Viet Nam struggle.

Los Angeles Under Curfew As Rioting Claims 22 Lives

VIRTUALLY NOTHING remains of a string of business establishments on a principal street in Watts, Los Angeles' riot-wracked suburb, Saturday as fires started by rioting mobs die down. Other establishments across the street were broken into and looted but escaped the flames. (AP Wirephoto)

Troops Clear Out Looters But Snipers Take To Roofs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Death and destruction mounted Saturday night in a riot ripped Negro district as police and National Guardsmen shot it out with shadowy figures who defied a curfew.

In a major engagement of four days of terror, violence, pillage and ruin 150 firemen trying to fight a major store blaze were pinned down by vicious sniper fire. Forty National Guardsmen and police roared up to help and also had to take cover.

Tear gas — first reported since rioting began Wednesday night — enabled the firemen to withdraw. But five were hospitalized from its effects.

Death Toll Climbs

A fire department command post also was hit by sniper fire.

As the evening wore on 22 deaths were reported, three of them new. All were Negro rioters. The other 19 were shot Friday night and Saturday. The toll: a white deputy sheriff shot, a white fireman crushed by a falling wall, a white civilian shot and 17 Negroes shot or otherwise fatally wounded.

Bullets began 3rd graf 5th nl ta109

Bullets began flying at nightfall. Two sheriff's deputies were wounded in a blazing gun battle with a group of snipers. One sniper was killed.

National Guardsmen reportedly shot and wounded one of two Negroes who they said tried to run a road block.

After 8 p.m. curfew time the streets cleared — so far as could be seen.

Rioter tactics changed. Instead of roving in clumps, they hid behind trees and bushes and on rooftops. There were numerous instances of sniper fire at police and National Guard vehicles — with officers and troopers returning it.

Parts of the city were like a battlefield — volleys of shots crackling, buildings burning, soldiers skirmishing.

"They got the looters off the streets," one newsmen said. "But now they're on roofs with rifles and pistols.

The police-National Guard command post said it had control of the perimeter of the vast troubled area, but inside it was bedlam.

Firemen were targets, too. Units heading for a major blaze came under fire. Upon hearing this, a National Guard contingent rolled up to protect fire fighters.

As the curfew came the streets began clearing. Reporters in the Negro district said some streets were empty.

Guardsmen in Jeeps with machine guns mounted on them went into action escorting busloads of officers.

One officer said: "We're interested particularly in getting looters out of doorways, alleys and anywhere they might hide. We've got to stop it.

"We hope the troops will create an impression of control and bring peace to the area."

Looting and burning of stores continued throughout the day and into the night — filling the daylight sky with towering columns of black smoke, the night sky with an orange glow.

Damage estimates in burned buildings and stolen merchandise ranged as high as $100 million, though so confused was the situation no one possibly could make an accurate estimate.

Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson signed a curfew proclamation Saturday afternoon ordering all citizens off the streets in an 18-square-mile area during the night hours after 8 p.m. Anyone abroad after that hour would be arrested, he said.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown interrupted a vacation in Greece to fly here to try to halt it.

"I'm going to restore law and order," Brown said. "We're in a state of insurrection."

President Johnson offered federal aid, denouncing "killing, rioting and looting."

The four days of utterly uncontrolled rioting began Wednesday when a white policeman arrested a Negro on a drunken driving charge, a crowd gathered and got out of hand.

From a small, rock-throwing beginning the affairs mushroomed during a mid-90s heat wave. A variety of reasons have been offered: hostility against police and authority in general; alleged police brutality, hotly denied; pent-up release of minority group frustrations. Almost all agree that it was spontaneous, without leadership.

The guard was mobilized Friday, went into action Friday night and got reinforcements Saturday night.

First here was Los Angeles' 40th Armored Division, which was 8,000 combat troops. Arriving Saturday night from Northern California were first forces from the 49th Infantry Division, with 7,500 combat troops.

Actually in the riot area when the curfew fell were about 3,500 guardsmen plus several hundred police, sheriff's deputies and other peace officers.

The curfew affects about a 40-square mile area within a larger 42-square mile district of south-central Los Angeles which police earlier had declared an "unsafe area."

The area is about a tenth of the city.

Friday night the troops, operating with police, marched in columns through the streets. Rioters melted away in front of them, then reformed behind, or leapfrogged ahead.

Saturday night the troops changed tactics. Operating mostly in buses, they dashed up to curfew violators and tried to arrest them and herd them into buses before they got away.

At dusk Fire Capt. William Clutterham said after a helicopter flight over the Negro district that there were eight separate areas of major fires.

"There seemed to be at least eight major areas of big blazes. In each one there are groups of smaller fires that have burned or are burning dwellings. It's fantastic," Clutterman said.

"We swooped low in several places and saw three or four young Negroes putting wood scraps against buildings and setting them afire.

"We could see their faces but we just had to watch. We were helpless. And even if our units do get to a fire it's a losing game. We can try only to keep it from spreading. We don't have a chance to extinguish them.

GOP Solons Set To Blast Poverty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are wheeling up their mortars for a heavy bombardment of President Johnson's antipoverty program when the Senate takes up a $1.65 billion authorization bill Monday.

Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said Republicans will concentrate on what he called waste in a program he said has provided inordinately high salaries for administrators and is subject to political control.

"No good reports are coming from the country on this program and, believe me, I have been reading them all," Dirksen said in an interview. "There is waste, high salaries and in many local instances there is just no program at all for all of the spending in prospect."

Morton Adds Voice

Sen. Thruston B. Morton of Kentucky, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, supplemented this with the charge that the program "by mismanagement or design appears to be exploiting the poor rather than helping them."

"The poor get poorer as the politicians controlling the programs get stronger," he said.

Despite efforts to trim the amount to be provided for the program, however, Republicans privately have little hope of amending the authorization bill except for a possible reversal of the House action in virtually eliminating governors' vetoes over most projects in their states.

The Senate Education and Labor Committee voted 8-7 to eliminate governors' vetoes of community action, neighborhood Youth Corps and adult projects.

Weather Story Today 'Same'

The first day of the weekend was a good one Saturday for outdoor activities, bringing a high of 92 degrees and a low of 72 which accompanied sunny skies.

In the weather offing today should be continued warm temperatures together with partly cloudy skies and afternoon thundershowers in 30 to 50 per cent of the Northeast Louisiana area.

Maximum readings today should be between 88 and 92 and the low should be 70 to 74 tonight.

About 70 per cent sunshine is expected today and winds should be mostly southerly at five to 15 miles an hour.

Threatened Riots Cooled In Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — With 2,000 National Guard troops standing by, police appeared Saturday night to have brought Chicago's worst racial riot in more than a decade under control.

There were no outbreaks of violence in the West Side Lawndale district where, for two nights, thousands of Negroes had surged in a brick, bottle and Molotov cocktail - hurling rampage.

The National Guardsmen, ordered to active duty by Gov. Otto Kerner at midafternoon to guard against more riots, remained in their seven armories. Their orders were not to move out unless the hundreds of Chicago policemen already assigned to Lawndale could not keep order.

No Call For Help

As the hot, sultry night wore on, there was no call for help.

Police Lt. Tom Hayes reported "it's very quiet — just like Tuesday night when it's nine below zero."

Police Supt. O. W. Wilson asked Kerner for the Guardsmen after a midday conference with Mayor Richard J. Daley. Wilson strongly implied he wanted the insurance of the troopers to guarantee against the Chicago riots swelling to the furious dimensions of the outbreaks tearing Los Angeles.

At least 123 persons have been arrested and 80 injured since the Lawndale district erupted into violence late Thursday night. The riots were triggered when a runaway fire engine emerging from the fire station at Wilcox and Pulaski streets killed a young Negro woman bystander.

The August air was stifling but the tension seemed less than 24 hours earlier around the fire station as nightfall approached Saturday. The streets were crowded with cars, most of them containing Negroes, passing the firehouse on apparent sightseeing trips.

Children and teen-agers sat on the front steps, watching, while their elders gathered in neighborhood bars.

Helmets Unloaded

Police served notice they would not allow streetcorner harangues, such as preceded Friday night's riots. Thirteen cartons of white crash helmets-unseen until the riot reached its peak Friday night — were unloaded in readiness.

The callout of the National Guard marked the first time in 13 years that Illinois troopers had been summoned to quell a racial outbreak.

In making his announcement in Springfield, Ill., Kerner said "Supt. Wilson indicated he has complete confidence that any potential civil disturbances can be handled by the Chicago police force."

Indian Holiday To Be Marred By Bad Times

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India marks its 18th year of independence Sunday, gravely threatened by a wide variety of ills.

Guerrilla war is being fought in the north; students and political extremists are rioting in the east and south, and food demonstrations have erupted in the west.

India's relations with neighboring Pakistan are approaching new lows; those with Communist China and other neighboring nations aren't much better.

In all, things probably are at their worst since British colonial rule ended in 1947.

Indian leaders clearly are deeply concerned by what Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri calls these "perilous times." They are voicing calls for national unity and internal peace to enable the country to meet its many challenges.

The most serious problem is the fighting in Kashmir, a thorn in India's side for the entire 18 years of its independent history and the most galling irritant in India-Pakistan relations.

Homecoming Halted For Navy, Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of Marines and Navy men who thought they would be returning to civilian life soon received new orders Saturday:

Stay on for four months beyond the scheduled end of enlistment terms.

This involuntary extension of active duty for enlisted men in the regular establishment was ordered by Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze.

The purpose is to enable the Marines and Navy to carry on until the two services can build up more manpower under the recent presidential authorization for expansion in the nation's armed strength.

Viet Nam is one direct factor. The Marines, with about 36,000 men deployed in Viet Nam, want to keep experienced men there until trained replacements can be sent.

For this reason, the order becomes applicable to the Marine Corps almost a month earlier than to the Navy.

Nitze's order says the four-month extension applies to Marines on Aug. 20, to the Navy on Sept. 15.

This means enlisted Marines whose terms of enlistment would have expired on Aug. 20 or thereafter are caught in the new order. Navy men whose scheduled service departure date was Sept. 15 or later are affected.

The immediate impact will be on about 25,000 Navy men and 12,000 Marines whose normal release from service would have come between now and the beginning of next year.

However, the order will continue to affect others whose enlistments expire after next January, meaning that each of them will have four months added to his service.

Navy and Marine officers are affected, but face even longer extended duty. The order says of them that "approval of requests for voluntary retirement may be withheld for a period of 12 months."

But in the case of both enlisted and officer personnel Navy and Marines will take into consideration har-ship cases.

Foreign Papers View U.S. Trouble

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rioting in Los Angeles has received mixed treatment in foreign newspapers, with some handling the story in a restrained manner and others giving it full front-page display. Several Communist press agencies took the opportunity to criticize the United States.

Communist China's official New China News Agency described the riot as "a general outburst of their (Negroes) pent-up dissatisfaction."

NCNA in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo said: "It is not a mere coincidence that the Negro struggle against police brutality in Los Angeles has become so fierce.

"Some leaders of the Negro movement have warned that the Negro district was calm only in appearance, for the 330,000 Negroes, or 12 per cent of the population of the city, were always dissatisfied with discrimination in employment, housing, education and in other fields, with abject poverty and savage police persecution."

The East German news agency said: "Apparently the rioting is not organized, and certainly not by civil rights groups. Various observers see in the events a consequence of race politics in the U.S.A."

The Soviet news agency Tass said Los Angeles "has literally turned in to a battlefield between the Negro population, protesting against racial discrimination, and the police. The police and units of the National Guard have resorted to arms against the demonstrators, but they were unable so far to 'restore law and order' and to make the Negro population knuckle under."

Papers in race-conscious South Africa have splashed Los Angeles Negro riots in their front-page leads the past two days.

The rioting pushed other stories off page one in London. The Daily Mirror headlined the story "Race Fury — Troops Face 5,000 Rioters." The headline in the reserved Times said "Los Angeles Calls in Riot Troops; Shots Fired at Police as Looting Spreads."

Most Paris newspapers gave big, black headline play to the Los Angeles rioting, but there was no editorial comment. Only the tabloid Paris-Jour and Le Parisien Libere played it inside.

The page one headlines were roughly similar: "Bloody Racial Rioting in Los Angeles," "Violent Racial Rioting in Los Angeles," or "Violent Incidents in Los Angeles in the Black Quarter."

In Norway and Spain, reports of the riots were placed on inside pages, without editorial comment. Cairo and Brussels papers gave front page display to the stories, also without editorial comment.

In New Delhi, newspapers were too busy reporting Indian riots to give more than secondary mention to the Los Angeles story.

Total Of Nine Wells Now In Bay Springs

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Production casing has been set on two wells in the Bay Springs Field of Jasper County, bringing the total producers there to nine.

Skelly Oil Co. prepared to complete its Troy Sims No. 1 after logging a reported 62 feet of oil sand in the 14,500 Cotton Valley zone of the field.

Shell, Pan American and Pruet have casing set on their Sims No. 1, flowing 721 barrels of oil per day from the 14,500 foot sand with a pressure of 2,340 pounds.

Two other wells are near the coring point for the field pay. Skelly's No. 1 Hall is below 13,200 feet.

The Bay Springs Field was discovered in January and is considered a major deep oil producing reservoir. The daily oil allowable is 500 barrels of oil per day. All of the producers are capable of daily flow rates in excess of the allowable.

Shell Oil Co. completed its Smith County wildcat after two months of testing. The well is flowing 212 barrels from Smackover lime perforations at 16,080 feet. Operators are reported preparing to install a hydraulic pump with the discovery having low flowing pressures. The well is northwest of the Bay Springs Field.

CROWLEY, La. (AP)— Two escapees from Vermilion Parish jail at Abbeville are back in custody there.

Civil Disorder Not Wholly New To U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American history is dotted with instances of riots or civil disorders which took many lives. Following are brief descriptions of some of the major ones:

May 10, 1849, New York City, the Astor Place riots — 34 persons died in rioting against an English actor, in retaliation for the treatment of American actor Edwin Forrest in London four years earlier.

July, 1863, New York City, the draft riots — Several hundred persons were killed or wounded and more than 50 buildings were burned in five days of rioting against the Army draft.

May 4, 1886, Chicago, the Haymarket riot — Bitter labor battles for an 8-hour day climaxed in attacks on strike breakers, police violence and anarchist incitement. Seven policemen were killed and 66 were injured by a bomb blast.

July 6, 1892, Homestead, Pa., Carnegie steel strike — Fighting between Pinkerton guards and strikers took 18 lives and wounded many persons.

June 22-23, 1922, Herrin, Ill., coal mine strike — Violence killed 36 persons.

June 21, 1943, Detroit and New York City, race riots — Rioting broke out in both cities on the same day, killed 34 and injured 700 in Detroit and killed 6 in New York's Harlem.

'Bread Tax' Talk Not Best For LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — They're talking "bread tax" on Capitol Hill and in that talk may lie the seeds of President Johnson's first big legislative defeat of the year.

To supporters of the administration's farm bill, which goes before the House Tuesday, the talk is "poppycock" — "as phony as a $3 bill," says California Democrat B. F. Sisk.

But opponents of the measure say the talk is a statement of fact, that its wheat provision will lead to higher bread prices, a burden especially to the poor — "a war on poverty in reverse," Illinois Republican Paul Findley calls it.

While the talk circulates, while Findley uses a mink collar borrowed from a neighbor to charge the rich are being treated better than the poor by Congress, while the bankers' lobby locks horns with the wheat growers' lobby, there is talk backstage of a compromise that could keep the President's batting record on big bills at 1.000.

In broad outline, it would raise the price level at which the government could resell surplus grain, thereby curbing the competition the government poses to private grain dealers.

The second part of the compromise would be retention in the main of the controversial wheat section.

The result, friends of the bill hope, would be attraction of Midwest Republicans to make up for the big city Democrats who are at odds with the White House on the bread issue.

That there will be Democratic defectors is a cinch. Rep. James J. Delaney, a New York City Democrat, told a reporter his Northern colleagues will find it almost impossible to support legislation leading to a bread price rise.

And when Agriculture Committee members went before the Rules Committee seeking clearance of the bill for the floor, a Boston Democrat, Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, said:

"Since the advent of President Kennedy it has been the Northern city people who have been passing the farm bill. Now because the price of bread is going up the bill is in serious trouble."

The cause of all this stir is a proposed 50-cent increase — from 75 cents to $1.25 — in the cost of certificates millers now buy along with each bushel of domestic wheat they buy from growers.

Rep. Albert Quie, a Minnesota Republican who will lead the attack on this provision, says "It's very definitely fair to call this a bread tax." For one thing, he said in an interview, the government collects the certificate payments, then distributes proceeds to the wheat farmers.

Viet Nam Letters Not Publishable

OTTAWA (AP) — An exchange of letters between Ottawa and Washington concerning Canadian aid for Viet Nam will to be made public because President Johnson considers it undesirable, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson announced Saturday.

In a statement issued by his office, Pearson said President Johnson considers publication of the exchange "to be undesirable because these letters formed part of a series of exchanges between for President and other heads of government."

Pearson's statement said it had been hoped the exchange of letters or a summary of them might be made public because of "widespread Canadian interest in the subject matter." The main point of interest is whether Johnson asked Canada for direct military aid to South Vietnamese and American forces fighting in Viet Nam.

Pearson's statement Saturday said Canada will limit aid to the type of assistance now given to South Viet Nam — foodstuffs and medical supplies

Russian Journal Calls For Closer Economic Links

LONDON (UPI)—The Moscow-orientated international Communist movement called Saturday for closer economic ties with capitalist countries, including "joint operations" and long-term cooperation agreements.

The call was contained in the current "World Marxist Review," the organ of the pro-Moscow world Communist movement.

It said monetary problems and those of convertibility need not stand in the way of expanding cooperation.

Behind the call emerged the growing anxiety of Communist countries that they may be left far behind unless they get supplies and know-how from the capitalist West.

The study listed three procedures to enlarge economic and trade cooperation between the Communist and capitalist nations:

—Five-year agreements on the supply of certain types of raw materials and manufactures, with periodic revision of prices and payments. These arrangements are to be complemented by other "transactions" over shorter periods.

—Agreements on the supply (on credit) of machines and other equipment for new projects, including licenses, installation of plants and introduction of new technological processes.

Credits should be spread over several years and repaid, partly or in full in the products of the newly built or reconstructed plant.

Old Cemetery Will Be Worked

Between 50 and 60 volunteer workers are expected to take part this week in a sprucing-up of an old cemetery in Ouachita Parish which was established a century ago as a burial site for soldiers killed in the Civil War.

The one-day work operations will start around 8 a.m. Friday at the Smith Cemetery off of Old Natchitoches Road near West Monroe, which is maintained on a non-profit basis by the families and friends of persons buried there, it was announced by E. L. Beebe, trustee.

Also on that occasion there will be an election of three trustees who will serve without pay.

THE NORTHERN Yankee and the Southern Belle stopped fighting the Civil War long enough to form a husband and wife team that will steer the L. B. Faulk Post No. 13, American Legion in Monroe the coming year. At a barbecue to be held at the Legion Home, on Forsythe Ave., Aug. 28 at 6:30 p.m., Mrs. R. W. Sherman will be installed for the second year as auxiliary president, while her husband, R. W. Sherman will be installed as Commander.

School Problems

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —Louisiana school officials met here Saturday to discuss problems of newly desegregated schools.

Authorities from throughout the country who have experienced problems involved in desegregating schools spoke at seminars.

One of the speakers, Dr. Eddie Belcher, assistant Superintendent of Louisville, Ky., schools, said, "There is still a struggle of attitude in the minds of people all over the country concerning the integration process."

Alaskan Taken From Mountain After Injuries

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Anchorage man, badly hurt in a fall to a rocky ledge 2,000 feet up on the side of Cooper Mountain, was plucked from a rainswept slope Saturday by an Air Force rescue team which braved 30-knct winds and rain to make the pickup 50 miles south of here.

The rescue operation was completed after Edmund H. Waszkiewicz, 25, had spent the night on the brush-covered mountain slope with a doctor and two paramedics who had been lowered late Friday to his aid.

Waszkiewicz was flown to Providence Hospital at Anchorage, where a spokesman said he was suffering from a fractured left hip, a fractured right knee and a broken right ankle.

The young man was hurt earlier Friday when he fell while climbing with his wife on a sheep-hunting expedition.

Smoke, Glass, Ruins Remain After Rioting

(EDITOR'S NOTE: National Guardsmen swept through embattled South Los Angeles Friday night, temporarily quieting the area. But at dawn, the looters emerged again. Following is an eyewitness report by a reporter on the scene).

By WARREN WILSON

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — At daybreak Saturday, the street was deserted except for combat - armed National Guardsmen, posted at intervals.

The length of the thoroughfare, in the heart of the Negro section, was in ruins from a night of vandalism and terror. Buildings that had once made the area a business district were smoldering from fires that burned out of control for hours in some cases.

Smoke covered the skyline, telling a story Los Angeles will never forget.

At about 6:40 a.m. the commander of a contingent of the Fourth Battalion of the 160th Infantry announced the area secured.

A few deputy sheriffs remained on the street, supported by soldiers who were ready for battle.

An hour later the last of the National Guardsmen and deputies pulled out and returned to bivouac areas.

One could see a scattering of police emerging from side streets where they had been watching and waiting for daylight and a chance to loot and burn again.

As the sun rose on the smoke-filled skyline the streets became more crowded. Looting began at full pace, free from the eyes of policemen.

Police stayed out of the area except to set up roadblocks for tired firemen who raced back and forth fighting fires, some in the same place they had battled flames before.

Policy Planners Working Up Aid To Latin Island

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. policy planners are preparing a multi-million dollar program for the economic rehabilitation of the Dominican Republic.

Although no specific amount was mentioned, reliable sources have reported the United States will pour millions of dollars into the country though a special development fund, called "The Program for the Rehabilitation of the Dominican Republic."

The fund will be administered by the Organization of American States (OAS). However, actual financial support will come from U.S.-sponsored lending agencies.

Besides this, the Peace Corps now is studying plans to send 1,000 or more volunteers. They would be employed chiefly in rural and urban community development projects.

Westerhoff Promoted To Head Of Firm

Russell P. Westerhoff of Ridgecrest, N. J., has been named president of Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc. He succeeds Charles C. Whittelsey of Monroe who will continue as chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

Westerhoff, a vice president and director since 1951, began his career with the firm after he received his master's degree in civil engineering in 1928 from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The new president is also a director and vice president of subsidiary companies, Ford, Bacon and Davis Construction Corp., of Monroe, and Ford, Bacon and Davis Canada Limited.

He was the project manager for the design and construction of a $45 million alcohol butadiene plant and a styrene plant at Institute, W. Va., in connection with World War II synthetic rubber programs. These were the first plants of the kind built in the United States.

Westerhoff also played a major role in the design and supervision of construction of two 200,000-kw steam electric generating stations in Ohio for a large chemical company and multimillion dollar bakeries in Portland, Ore., and Philadelphia.

Demonstrations In Area Listed

Negroes marched in demonstrations in the two area towns of Homer and Ferriday Saturday, reportedly without incidents, being led by members of the Congress of Racial Equality.

At Homer, some 50 Negroes, one half of them members of the CORE organization from out of town, authorities said marched on the Claiborne Parish School Board Office grounds in downtown Homer about 11 a.m., protesting alleged inadequacies in the Negro public schools of the parish and alleged inaction by the school board on a petition presented Aug. 2 asking that Negroes be admitted to parish public schools.

The demonstrators at Homer received a permit to march to and from the office and sheriff's deputies escorted the procession.

Marchers at Ferriday were led by Ronnie Moore, CORE field secretary, to the city jail where they protested the arrest of MacArthur Jones, 16, a Negro, who on Aug. 10 was sentenced to 30 days in jail for using profane language.

About 100 Negroes participated in the three-mile march at Ferriday.

Police, sheriff's deputies and FBI agents were present during the demonstration.

Killed In Washer

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —Two-year-old Pierre Etienne, a New Orleans Negro child, was killed Saturday when he fell from his crib into a open, top-loading washing machine which was in operation.

Authorities said the tot was apparently in the machine for 10 minutes before he was missed. He apparently died of a broken neck and bruises when he became wrapped around the agitator.

Photographer Almost Killed By Riot Shots

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Free lance photographer Boris Yarrow was trapped for a time Saturday in cross-fire of National Guardsmen and Negro snipers. He tells about it in the following story written for The Associated Press.)

By BORIS YAROW

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I thought I might never get the chance to write this story as I huddled against a bank building early Saturday in South Los Angeles with bullets whizzing all around me.

Most of the shooting was being done by a National Guard unit at a roadblock a scant 100 feet away. Sniper fire from Negroes was also heavy.

I felt like a headlighted target in my ample plaid coat. (Yarow is 6 foot 1 and weighs 230 pounds.)

The shotting was at a car whose two occupants tried to run the road block. The auto and its occupants were hit. The car careened out of control and knocked down a power pole in a splash of blue smoke.

The driver, attempting to run from rifle and machine gun fire, was shot down at 103rd Street and Compton Boulevard. Ambulance drivers said both occupants of the car died on the way to the hospital.

When the firing died down I picked up my camera and ran to a command post in a fire station half a block down the street. It, too, was under fire.

As I crossed the street I was shot at.

Police Investigate

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — City police opened wider their investigation Saturday of the shooting of a white youth in a Negro neighborhood here.

Officers said David Parker, 17, of Laurel, was shot in the back of the head as he drove a car through the area Friday night.

He was listed in serious condition at Baptist Hospital in Jackson.

Investigators said young Parker and two friends, a boy and a girl, were in the car when a shot rang out.

Riot Scene Tranquil In Glaring Daylight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Daylight came and brought with it an eerie tranquility to the riot-smashed southeast section of Los Angeles Saturday.

Householders emerged from their homes and watered their lawns. Clerks and workmen waited on street corners for buses as police and the National Guard patroled the area.

Even the prostitutes, abundant in the area, were out on the street soliciting. The area long has had a serious vice problem.

Big difference between night and day were the age groups.

The gangs of the night were mostly youthful, hellbent on death and destruction. The daylight crowds were mostly embarrassed adults of the Negro community.

One summed it up: "This is all so crazy, it's hard to believe it happened here. It will set the civil rights movement back 20 years."

The quieted daylight scene accented the horror of the night before.

Smoke from countless fires hovered over the area like a blanket of smog. Firemen, unsung heroes of the night, still fought raging fires.

Streets, like the broad thoroughfares of Broadway and Manchester, were a sea of glass. Bottles by the hundreds were tossed at passing police cars during the night.

The scene looked like the aftermath of an air raid. Water mains were broken. Building fronts were wrecked. Roofs and walls were caved in.

Along a five block area of 103rd Street, the scene resembled a set for a war movie.

Stores, with widows smashed, were stripped. Looters had carted off television sets, lawnmowers, liquor, anything that could be carried.

One police official said:

"I've been an officer for 18 years and I've never seen anything like it.

"I almost feel stupid when I phone in my reports because I know the people on the other end can't possibly imagine all the turmoil and confusion that exists and which I try to describe.

"No radio or television or newspaper account can possibly measure what we have seen.

"It's all so unbelievable."

All Ships Alert Called To Hunt Missing Sailor

FALMOUTH, England (UPI) — A new "all ships alert" was issued Saturday as Cleveland newsman-sailor Robert Manry, unsighted for five days, battled wind and waves in his tiny sailboat on the last and most hazardous leg of his epic 3,200 mile solo Atlantic crossing.

Lloyds of London asked all shipping in the area where the Cleveland Plain Dealer copy editor was last seen to keep a sharp lookout for his 13½-foot long boat and report any sighting.

Anxiety for Manry's safety was growing hourly as trawlers, one of them carrying his 46-year-old wife Virginia, scoured an area 150 miles west of Scilly Isles and constantly reported "no sighting."

Manry was last spotted from the air on Monday when he was about 265 miles from Land's End, the extreme southwest tip of England.

Official Says Chinese Fan India's Fires

SRINAGAR, Kashmir (AP) — Kashmir's India-supported Gov. Karan Sing charged Sunday that Communist China trained the guerrillas he asserted Pakistan sent into this Himalayan state.

The government charges at least 3,200 Pakistanis have infiltrated.

Sing, 34, said, "It is a meticulously trained and equipped operation and Pakistan seems to have made good use of its newfound friends from China. We had heard for some time there were Chinese in the Pakistan-held part of Kashmir and now it is perfectly clear what they were after," he said.

He based his claim of assistance from Peking on information from captured infiltrators and the equipment they carried, he said.

Kashmir faced "a very grave situation and I can safely say we are on top of it," he noted.

He said the mopping-up operation would be "a drawn-out affair."

The governor, a scholar, author and poet whose ancestors ruled Kashmir as maharajas, said no emergency had been declared to meet the situation.

Billy Graham Urges Action To Stop Riots

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham said Saturday night Congress should take action immediately to curb the violence that is rocking the nation.

Graham said the situation is growing so serious that the nation's lawmakers should drop other legislative considerations immediately and "devise new laws to curb the type of violence that is going on in California, Illinois and Massachusetts."

The noted preacher, who many years ago opened his meetings to all races, said in an interview with the Asheville (NC.) Citizen-Times he believes "sinister forces in the country are trying to set race against race and class against class with the ruthless objective of overthrowing the government."

"In this dangerous situation," he said, "we need new tough laws, as well as a great spiritual awakening in America."

He said he believes the riots taking place in Los Angeles, Chicago and Massachusetts are "only the beginning — a dress rehearsal for revolution."

Japanese Recalls Emperor's Words

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese people heard the broadcast 20 years ago Sunday: "The war situation has developed not necessarily to Japan's advantage."

The recorded voice of Emperor Hirohito was announcing surrender in the World War II struggle he said was waged against the United States and Britain "to insure Japan's self-preservation and the stabiliazation of east Asia."

The record had come safely overnight through an attempt by a group of diehard young Japanese army officers to seize it from the imperial palace and force continuance of the fighting.

Court chamberlains and one of the participants, former Lt. Col. Masataka Iwata, told the story of the abortive coup Saturday.

Now a balding, bespectacled employe of a big advertising firm, Iwata said in a television broadcast the officers took over the palace to "insulate the emperor from the outside and beg His Majesty to reconsider his decision to surrender.

"Until the emperor's decision to surrender, it was the unified determination of the four million officers and men of the armed forces to have another fight on the Japanese mainland," Iwata said.

Elaborating in an interview with the English-language Asahi Evening News, he said:

"I don't know how many hundreds of thousands of American lives would have had to be sacrificed, but it is certain that millions of Japanese — soldiers as well as civilians — would have lost their lives in the last stand."

The broadcast was made on schedule at noon Aug. 15, 1945.

Four of the ringleaders in the plot committed suicide.

NSSL President

CHICAGO (AP) — Rep. William L. Blaser of Park Forest, Ill., was elected president Saturday of the National Society of State Legislators, a new organization designed to improve the lot of state legislators.

Johnson 'Proud' Of Registration Among Negroes

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson said Saturday "I am proud" of the progress in registering Negro voter applicants in the South, both by civil service examiners and local officials.

He commended "all who made this progress possible," but added: "We must not stand, however, on one week's progress."

In four days through Friday, federal examiners qualified 6,998 Negroes as voters in the nine counties in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, the Texas White House announced Saturday.

The 41 federal examiners working there had a record day Friday when they processed 2,239 applications. Of this total 2,191 were listed for voting while 48 were rejected.

In four days, press secretary Bill D. Moyers said, four times as many Negroes were added to voting rolls as were registered in the nine counties previously.

'The Metro Is Paris' Monsieur!'

There is a hint of warmth, and the sun manages to sneak a few of its rays through the mists of an autumn Paris morning. Shopkeepers along the Rue Durantin are open for business, and it is easy to see why the occupation of being a gourmet is one of the national traditions of France. The meats and produce displayed along the Durantin are enough to make even a light eater nervous. Maman is already abroad doing the morning shopping, and merchants arrange their shelves and stalls. Heavily laden trucks crunch up the cobblestone street, and a busy little car honks its way through the melee.

Where the Durantin meets Abbesses, there is a little park. There is also a cinema, and more stores surround the tree filled area. In the middle of the park is a sort of building. On its roof, a sign loudly proclaims "Metro." Through the door of the little building are a hundred or more miles of the Paris metropolitan underground transportation. No point in the city is more than thirty minutes away.

Walking down the steps at Abbesses, one catches a sense of destiny — as if entering another world. Indeed, the Metro is not just a subway; it is almost alive. It has purpose, and it has an odd sort of grandeur. In the main lobby of the station, there is a huge "plan" of the city.

Today, the hoped for destination is the left bank and the Boulevard St. Michele. How to get there? The plan makes it easy. There are several columns of buttons each marked with a station name. One merely pushes the button marked Abbesses and another marked St. Michele. Voila! The plan sparkles with light. Abbesses, one recognizes, is on line number 12. There is one change along the way at the Sevres - Babylone station. The whole thing is as simple as falling into the Seine, and anyone who is equipped with a map and has a destination can consult the plan. Success is almost a guarantee.

Then, one looks for the turnstiles. There are no turnstiles. This is no ordinary subway. The Metro has character, and there is a ticket office at Abbesses. One also finds that travelers can ride either first class or tourist. There are a few anxious minutes with Monsieur, the Agent, who speaks no English. Finally, success, and one has a sheath of second class tickets. There is another agent who is a collector of tickets, and she advises that the way to the train is down below.

On and on, one descends, far into the depths of Paris. The downward tunnel has an iron ceiling and it somehow resembles the cargo hold of a tramp steamer. Finally, there is a huge boilerplate lined cavern, and if Lucifer stepped out in a red suit holding a trident, no one would be suprised. This is the platform. The tunnel walls abound with enough advertising to bring shame on Madison Avenue, and many people await the train.

Those who expect the usual crashing, screeching endless train of subway cars to roar into the station are in for happy disappointment. Instead, a little five car train parades happily up to the platform in a manner similar to a Parisian lady modeling clothes in a salon. It is almost, but not quite, a haughty train. Instead, it has culture. The first and last two cars are painted a bright cream yellow. The middle car is a dark red. On its side in discreet letters is printed, "Premier Clase." Ah, ha, first class! One should have known by a glance. The first and last two cars are packed while aboard "Premier Clase," passengers seem to lounge and read newspapers in a dignified, almost rarified atmosphere. All cars are trimmed with shiny brass and are highly polished inside and out.

Everybody crunches aboard the tourist cars and the little train clanks on its way. Stations with familiar names pass by — Pigalle, Madeleine, Concorde, Chambers des Deputies, and then Sevres-Babylone. Up the stairs to another platform, another train, and more stations rush by.

At St. Michele, there is a walk up the steps into the clean air of a Paris morning. It is a beautiful day. Leaves rustle in an easy breeze, and a vendor has long loaves of bread. A kiosk announces the next national lottery, and down below, in the other world, the little trains clank on. "Premier Clase," boiler plate, and shiny brass —the Metro is Paris, Monsieur!

Negro On Force

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI) — The Alexandria police department has added a Negro, the first to be on the force.

Police chief Stafford Riche said the new officer, Grady W. Metoyer, 21, a native of Alexandria, will spend his first few weeks undergoing orientation training at police headquarters. Riche said he will then be assigned to duty on a beat with a veteran officer.

Election Officials Say Bad Method To Hurt Polling

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Top election officials said Saturday indiscriminate federal registration of illiterates could be costly and could upset Louisiana's election machinery.

Secretary of State Wade O. Martin and voting machine custodian Douglas Fowler said it will be impossible for illiterates to cast intelligent votes.

Fowler said registration of 20,000 more Negroes would require at least 50 more voting machines immediately.

He said he plans to seek talks with Gov. John McKeithen and the Legislative Budget Committee about funds to finance purchase of the equipment.

Fowler said Louisiana probably will need 400 more voting machines at cost of $500,000 in another year, and probably 150 more in the 1966-68 fiscal year to keep up with a normal voter increase.

Martin said it is apparent that increased registration of illiterates and their efforts to vote could effectively cast ballots for candidates for all offices to be filled, either in the present time allowed for voting or with an extension of that time.

Three minutes is allowed for casting ballots under the law.

Fowler said voters could not harm voting machines through lack of knowledge how to use them.

College Boom

With Jimmy Hatten

THE COLLEGE ENROLLMENT boom we've heard so much about is here.

On the first day of this month, Louisiana Tech officials estimated an enrollment of 6,000 students at that institution this fall.

The dean of student affairs, S. X. Lewis, said that if housing were available, the figure would pass 6,200.

A Public Affairs Research Council study released in July 1964 had figured Tech would not go over the 6,000 mark until 1966.

The PAR projection anticipates an enrollment of 6,971 by 1970, but it would appear that the figure may far surpass that if the trend continues.

A TECH RECORD was set in the fall of 1964 when 5,251 students enrolled. The rate of increase the past few years has been great. A gain of 486 students was showed from the previous year in 1963 while a gain of 875 was accomplished in 1964.

The study shows that Northeast State College should have an enrollment of about 6,234 by 1970, or better than two and one-half times the enrollment of 2,320 in 1958.

If the PAR projection holds, here's the way public institutions will line up in 1970, according to enrollment: (1) LSU main campus, 21,562; (2) University of Southwestern, 9,863; (3) LSU, New Orleans, 9,561; (4) Southern University, 9,229; (5) Louisiana Tech, 6,971; (6) Northeast, 6,234; (7) Southeastern, 5,920; (8) Northwestern, 5,690; (9) Grambling, 5,560 and (10) McNeese, 4,406.

A REARRANGMENT in status is in the making in this population growth. If the projection holds, Northeast will go from seventh to six, Northwestern will slip from sixth to eighth, Southeastern will move from eighth to seventh, LSU, New Orleans will go from fourth to second, while Southern slips from third to fourth.

Louisiana Tech, in fifth, place, will hold firm, as will Grambling, in ninth and McNeese in 10th.

Officers Search For Killer Who Hacked Woman

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Police pressed a city-wide search Saturday for a man who hacked a 54-year - old barmaid to death with a machete and seriously wounded her male companion.

"Please don't, mister, please don't," Dorothy Spadoni screamed as she ran from a self-service laundry.

The man kept hacking with the 20 - inch blade until she crumpled, her clothes stripped from her body. She was cut at least a dozen times.

James Colbert, 45, the woman's companion, stabbed the assailant twice in the chest with a pocketknife. But the man turned on Colbert and hacked him in the head. Colbert was in critical condition with a fractured skull.

Police hunted a man with a Latin appearance. They found a bloodstained shirt in a driveway some four blocks from the laundromat.

The woman and Colbert had been washing clothes when Colbert told police he saw a man trying to rape Miss Spadoni in a dark corner of the laundromat.

He said he ran to the assailant and plunged the blade of his pocketknife twice into the man's chest. The assailant wheeled and struck Colbert.

Miss Spadoni ran into the street screaming for help. She had been stripped nearly nude. Her brassiere had been slashed by the machete.

She begged the man to stop. But he pursued her and began chopping her in the back until she collapsed.

Donald Guidry, a cab driver, witnessed the slaying. His dispatcher told him to try to find a police car. He found one a few blocks away.

Last Ship Sails From Old Yards

NEW YORK (UPI)—The last ship to be launched at the doomed Brooklyn Navy Yard slid down the ways Saturday in a shower of champagne spray and a few tears.

Mrs. Bruce Solomonson, daughter of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, smashed a bottle of buffly across the bow of the U.S.S. Duluth, an amphibious transport.

The ceremony was the last in the 164-year-old yard which will be closed by order of the government as an economy measure by June 30, 1966.

Soviet Marshal Claims Missiles Can Get Planes

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Soviet air marshal, in an apparent warning to U.S. planes bombing North Viet Nam, said Saturday Soviet antiaircraft missiles can shoot down aircraft flying at even the lowest altitudes.

Air Vice Marshal Vladimir Sudets, commander of Soviet antiaircraft defense troops, said Russia has "adequate means to detect and destroy any aircraft of any size and at any altitude, even the lowest ones."

He said his statement was true even bearing in mind it was "extremely difficult to detect in time aircraft at heights of 50 to 100 meters (162 to 327 feet)."

State May Gain From Medicare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Medicare - Social Security Act gives Louisiana a chance to gain some $50 million in added benefits in 1966 for an added cost of about $28 million.

The state could gain $79 million in added benefits in 1967 under the new act for an added cost of $51 million.

These are estimates of the Social Security Administration.

Benefits involved are those provided in the new act as health insurance for persons over 65 and increased social security payments for those covered by that program.

The agency figures that during 1966 Louisianians will receive a total of $272 million in social security benefits and health insurance benefits, whereas without the new medicare act these payments would have totaled only $222 million.

The gain in the social security payments is estimated at $32 million for the year while the new health insurance benefits are placed at $18 million for the year. The health insurance program doesn't become effective until July 1, 1966.

On the cost side the agency figures Louisiana employes and employers will pay an added $28 million during 1966. It is this added tax which is to finance the additional benefits.

The added tax comes in an increase from 3.62 per cent to 4.2 per cent which employers and employes pay in the form of a payroll tax and in the fact that the tax will be applicable to the first $6,600 of a workers wages, rather than to $4,800 as at present.

Under these two new provisos, a worker's social security payments could rise a maximum of $103.20 in the year — from a maximum of $174 for 1965 to $277.20 for 1966.

The Social Security administration figured that without the new act Louisiana workers and their employers would have paid a total of $229 million in social security taxes in 1966 but that with the new act the total will rise to $257 million, a gain of $28 million.

Projecting the estimates into 1967, the agency figures that Louisianians will receive total benefits of $312 million under the new act—$267 in social security payments and $45 million in health insurance benefits.

In early 1965 there were 24,186 board members directing county government affairs in the 3,049 counties of the United States. That's an average of eight per county.

Burning Viets' Huts Cited As Necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze explained Saturday why he believes U.S. Marines sometimes must burn huts in villages fortified by the Viet Cong.

In answering questions during an Associated Press interview on the controversy over action taken against the South Vietnamese village of Cam Ne earlier this month, Nitze said there is a "natural and inevitable adjunct" to defense of the air and supply base complex which extends outward around Da Nang.

This requires military security in the populated areas, he said, adding:

"Where those built-up areas are being utilized by the Viet Cong as defensive positions, bases for raids on our facilities or centers for harassment of loyal Vietnamese they are routinely cleared of Viet Cong forces.

"Where neither U.S. nor Vietnamese forces can maintain continuous occupancy it is necessary to destroy those facilities which have been developed by the Viet Cong for their purposes."

Nitze said the evidence is that in all instances requiring destruction they involved "sophisticated operating bases" built by the Viet Cong.

"The villages of Cam Ne and Chau Son (another hamlet to the north of Cam Ne), for example, were last entered in the face of gunfire and were found to contain extensive systems of tunnels and caves, many reinforced by concrete," he said.

And he said the Marines have received lethal fire from Cam Ne since the burnings there.

Nitze's comment that it is necessary to destroy facilities in areas which cannot be permanently garrisoned by U.S. or South Vietnamese forces seems to indicate there can be no guarantee that more such action will not be required — although the hope is it will not be necessary.

There appears to have been no flat order issued in the field forbidding Marines under fire from taking whatever action is required.

Nitze was asked if he or his naval-Marine headquarters staffs here had issued any new orders.

"No, only broad guidance relating to national policy and overall strategy is provided our commanders in the field," he replied.

"New orders are not necessary as the Navy and Marine units operating in Viet Nam have published orders on this subject which are adequate."

He referred to two such documents, one issued on July 7 by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of all U.S. forces in Viet Nam, and a similar order sent out July 10 by Marine Maj. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, commander of the 3rd Marine Amphibious Force.

Both orders say "the number of noncombatant casualties resulting from combat air and ground operations is a matter of concern" and that such casualties have an adverse effect on the attainment of national goals by the South Vietnamese government.

Both orders specify it is not the intention to "infringe upon the inherent right of an individual to defend himself against hostile attack; however, in the exercise of this right, the utmost in discretion and judgment must be used in the application of firepower."

Nitze and Marine Corps officials who were present during the interview emphasized that when village huts are burned or hit by gunfire it is not done in retaliation but only to stop enemy fire and to prevent the same places being used by the Viet Cong on a later occasion.

Massachusetts Police Hold 40 In Rights Action

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Police arrested about 40 civil rights demonstrators in downtown Springfield early today.

Two policemen were reported injured in making the arrests. One suffered a broken arm, it was reported.

A crowd of some 200 persons had gathered on Main Street near Court Park Square earlier. It dwindled to about 50 persons after midnight and they were allowed into the park.

Police then asked for an order from the parks superintendent to remove them and began the arrests.

At Winchester Square about 100 persons were listening to a man who identified himself as James Johnson, a New York City official from the Congress of Racial Equality, who was urging nonviolence.

This group dispersed quietly when asked to by police.

The group of about 50 downtown had been singing freedom songs in the park.

A cordon of 38 police circled the block-size park before the arrests began.

The demonstrators downtown had marched to the park, which is across the street from City Hall, after meeting first in Winchester Square, the scene of the second gathering.

There had been reports that many planned to camp in the park overnight.

"Curiosity should be carefully cherished in children — it is but an appetite after knowledge."

John Locke

What is Art Education? How does it differ from Fine Art? Why art in the elementary schools?

In teaching Art Education, we teach the child (all children — not just the talented ones) to express his own ideas through the medium of creative art. Every child has creative ability, a vivid imagination, a natural curiosity. He enjoys experimenting, trying new materials, using a variety of mediums. Creative power in a child is developed through an adequate background of experience. This experience is gained daily through seeing, feeling, hearing, thinking and doing. Art Education develops awareness. It develops the power to see as well as look, to feel as well as touch, to listen as well as hear, and to think for himself. Unless we encourage the child to do his own thinking, to be creative, the end result will lack originality.

As the child grows in experience and knowledge he will grow in self-confidence be eager to experiment enjoy doing creative work grow in ability

express his own ideas.

Rigid schedules and dictated activities are not conducive to create thinking. We use no patterns, no copy work, no mineographed outlines. Children need the satisfaction and feeling of personal accomplishment that comes from creative experiences.

The young child draws and paints an experience according to his understanding of it — not as it appears to the eye. He is not concerned with visual reality. His painting is an expression of his world — not our world. Parents or adults, in their wish to help the child, show him how to draw. "This is the way you make a house," or "That is all out of proportion — here, let me show you." With the best intentions, they are destroying the child's image and his confidence to express himself creatively. The child now wishes to please, so he tries to make his expressions follow the adult image rather than his own. This can easily destroy an interest in all creative expression. Only when the child becomes personally interested in expressing the visual world do we help him to understand the principles of drawing things the way he sees them. Usually this does not occur before the upper grade or junior high school levels. The purpose, then, of Art Education in the elementary school is to develop the child — give him self-confidence, a feeling that his opinions count for something, a respect for the work of others, a release from tensions, and an awareness and appreciation of the beauty all around him, and growth of his creative ability.

Art Education is "what art can do for the child." Fine Art is "what the child can do with art," and is taught later in art school or in special art lessons. Art education is most important in the early years when the child's personality is being developed. It is then when the child, himself, — not the painting or the craft — is most important.

U.S. Cavalrymen Pass Last Hours With Loved Ones

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Men of the proud 1st Cavalry Division spent their final hours with loved ones Saturday before heading for the jungles of Viet Nam to hit the enemy with a new fighting concept.

The 15,000-man unit is the first full U.S. division ordered into combat since Korea.

It specializes in an "airmobile" type of fighting that some military strategists believe is the only answer to the Viet Cong.

One of the division's officers, Maj. Charles Siler, 34, a native of Williamsburg, Ky., said the men are in top fighting form.

"They're ready," declared Siler. "Their morale is higher than any I've ever seen, and that includes Korea.

"These men were especially chosen and especially trained for this job. They're the best of the fighting men in the U.S. Army."

About 2,500 troops were to move out before dawn Sunday the rest of the division was to follow in the next four days. The soldiers were to be transported to troop-carrying ships at Savannah,Ga., Charleston, S.C. and Norfolk, Va.

The division's 1,600 wheeled vehicles and 434 helicopters were being loaded onto the converted World War II carrier Kula Gulf at Mayport Fla., and the carriers Boxer and Card at Mobile, Ala.

Controversy developed over use of the Kula Gulf, a rusty old vessel that was taken out of "moth balls" for the job.

Kinnard said the men would go to South Viet Nam "by other means."

Learn How To Use Camera Properly

A friend, who has photographic interests at the New York World's Fair, made an unofficial survey there recently and came up with what I thought were some startling conclusions.

His technique was simple. He just stopped and talked to as many people carrying cameras as he could. Judging from the number of camera - toters at the fair, taking pictures must be the second most popular pastime there after viewing the exhibits!

Whenever our friend talked to picture takers, they almost always exclaimed, "I hope they turn out!"

Question

Why the doubt in their minds? He went on to find that out, too.

Invariably the camera toters admitted that they had never read the instructions that came with the camera! Those who had new cameras usually said that the salesman had given them a list showing them at what stops to set the camera for various kinds of weather.

Others, who had borrowed cameras from friends or relatives, also carried such a list, supplied by the lender.

No wonder they wonder whether their pictures will come out. I'll bet a lot of times they don't! And that can be both heartbreaking and expensive.

There are two ways to whip the problem. The first, and simplest, is to buy one of the new, almost completely automatic cameras with built-in light meters. Then, with a minimum of practice, you can at least take pictures that will come out. If, for some reason, it is technically not possible to take a picture, these cameras have built-in devices that signal when not to shoot.

Master Camera

But better yet, why not face up to the problem and make up your mind that you are going to master your camera and not let it master you.

First, get a light meter if you don't have one on the camera and learn how to use it. Carry it around with you and take readings in all kinds of lighting situations, indoors and out, until your eyes reach the point where they can judge the light accurately. Make a game out of it, guessing first and checking on your own accuracy. You'll be surprised at how soon you can educate your eyes.

At the same time, sharpen up your judgment of distances. Try guessing the distance from you to object three, six and 10 feet away. Check your accuracy.

Now you're ready for a method used by professionals to familiarize themselves with new equipment. It's called the touch system and it works!

Focusing Knob

Start out with the focusing knob on your camera. Let's say, for example, that you have a Nikon F with a 50mm F-1.4 lens. Twist the barrel all the way to the right and it will be set on infinity.

Now, grasp the barrel with the left hand, thumb on top of the barrel and index finger on the bottom. Turn the barrel one eighth of a turn and the distance setting will read six feet. A quarter turn will give you a reading of 3.5 feet. Do it without looking until you can dial whatever distance you want without looking.

Now let's take F-stops. Using the same Nikon lens, the stops run from F-1.4, when the dial is turned all the way to the left, to F-16 when it is turned all the way to the right.

Notice that there are click stops between each stop. One click to the left from F-16 will give you F-11. Two clicks F-8. Three clicks F-5.6. Four clicks F-4. Five clicks F-2.8. Six clicks F-2. You stop at F-1.4.

Memorize the F - stops and number of clicks to each one. Now set your stops without looking. Easy, no?

If your camera doesn't have click stops, you can work it out the same way you did with the distance settings.

Speed Settings

The same holds true with speed settings. Some cameras have click stops that can be counted off to get the right speed. Others stop at both ends of the speed scale so that you can educate your hands on the amount of turn needed to get the speed you want. Some, though, like the Nikon dial, must be done visually.

Once you've mastered these things, you'll find you've also mastered your camera. Camera settings become automatic movements, something like shifting a car after you've driven for years.

But the real payoff comes in the pictures themselves. Released from the frustration of worrying about the various settings, you find yourself concentrating more on the picture and the picture will be better.

Try it, and be sure that your picture are going to turn out.

CURTAIN CALL

By JOYCE BIEGENWALD

There is always something sad about a theater between plays. The auditorium has a musty feel and the high ceilings backstage echo the slightest sound. There is no one crawling across the floor, paint bucket and brush in tow, no danger of being flattened by a falling drop, no dressers scurrying frantically for a needle and thread.

It's just big and empty and lonesome.

The need to borrow a few - costumes from the wardrobe department took your reporter backstage this past week and as always when the theater is dark, she found herself talking just a little more softly, walking with muted steps. In the dusky light, none of the glittering sets from the musical were in evidence, everything was orderly and still, as quiet as a cathedral.

Long For Action

It'll be nice when things get back to normal - utter confusion.

News from New York this week is that Ivan Uttal has been named director of an off - Broadway play, "Mr. Giglos." It goes into rehearsal soon and will open in late November. Ivan will be remembered as the guest director of our winter musical "Sound of Music."

More Tiles

We have a few more tiles to announce this week.

Velma Willey was presented a tile for her work on "The King and I," a gift from "her admirers." Also purchasing tiles were Marty Mullens, Donna Fragala and Bonnie Dolos, all for their parts in "The King and I."

Bob Evans says that all the original space alloted for tiles has been taken up, but that plans are underway to create more.

Incidentally, our Green Room wall is quite unique. If you've never seen the literally hundreds of wall tiles painted with names and dates going back to the very beginning of Monroe's community theater efforts, be sure to take a minute the next time you're in the theater and see them.

Man's Longest Space Trip Schedules Start Thursday

NNEDY, Fla. (AP) space flier and a re scheduled to on man's long- est planned space voyage, an eight-day orbital mission during which they are to make the first attempt to rendezvous with another satellite.

Air Force Lt. Col. L. Gordon Cooper Jr., 38, and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Charles Conrad Jr., 35, have so many interesting and unusual experiments packed into their eight-day Gemini 5 flight plan that their sky-high act might resemble a three-ring circus.

Launch

They are to launch their own satellite, which they call a "little rascal;" look for missile launchings; converse with another astronaut beneath the sea: take scores of photographs of land and celestial features; study eye charts; try to identify land patterns laid out on the ground, and make scientific measurements. No space walk is scheduled

Major interest will be the medical findings on how well man can withstand long exposure to space weightlessness. Cooper and Conrad are to be in space for a period that equals the time planned for America's first manned round trip to the moon.

If there are no problems, the flight will last 191 hours, 53 minutes, just seven minutes shy of eight days. Soviet cosmonaut Valery Bykovsky holds the world record of 119 hours, 6 minutes.

Cooper also seeks to become the first man to make a second orbital trip. He closed the Mercury program in 1963 with a 34-hour ride in the Faith 7 capsule. No Russian has made a second trip into space.

Graduate

Conrad, a Princeton graduate who has a blue anchor surrounded by stars and his initials tattied on his left forearm, said of his flight companion: "I feel a lot better about sitting up in the right-hand seat on my first ride with somebody that's been there before."

For the first time, a U.S. manned space capsule will use fuel cells for power, replacing heavier batteries. The cells convert hydrogen and oxygen to water and in the process produce electricity. The Gemini spacecraft does not have the capacity for carrying enough conventional batteries to provide power sufficient for eight days.

Blastoff of Gemini 5's Titan 2 booster rocket is scheduled for 9 a.m. EST on Thursday. It is to hurl the spacecraft into an orbit ranging from 100 to 219 miles above the earth — 43 miles higher than any U.S. astronaut has flown, but below the 307-mile Soviet record.

Much of the excitement and tension will be packed into the early hours of the flight when the astronauts are to launch their satellite and then chase it across the heavens.

During the second orbit — 2 hours, 7 minutes after launching — the satellite will be ejected by explosive devices from an equipment section at the base of the Gemini 5 spacecraft.

Cooper, the command pilot, then will back about 52 miles away from the satellite, which is called REP for Radar Evaluation Pod. Using a radar system, jet thrusters and a computer for calculations, Cooper will attempt to approach the pod, hoping to maneuver to within 20 feet of it during the fourth orbit.

The rep is an ungainly 76-pound assembly of antennas, flashing lights, batteries and a radar transponder. The radar system has elements in both the spacecraft and the REP and operates like two persons trying to find each other in the dark by using flashlights to signal back and forth until they come together.

When Gemini 5 comes close to the pod, Cooper plans to circle it for nearly an hour to permit Conrad to take pictures of it from various angles.

"We've spent a great many hours in simulation chasing this little rascal around," Cooper said, "and learned that this rendezvous is not a real snap, that there's a great deal of complexity."

Testing

Cooper emphasized that testing the radar and not the rendezvous was the main goal of the experiment. He said fuel usage would determine the extent of maneuver around the pod after the radar has zeroed in on it.

"If we prove that the radar works and then pass within only a couple hundred feet of the pod, but don't want to expend the fuel to stop, that doesn't mean that we haven't rendezvoused," Cooper said. "We're saving our fuel for something else. We've proved our part of the flight. That's Wally and Tom's job to stop and dock with the Agena."

Cooper referred to the Gemini 6 flight scheduled in October during which an attempt will be made to hook up the Gemini spacecraft with an Agena satellite launched by an Atlas-Agena rocket. An identical radar system will be used. The pilots will be Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., and Air Force Maj. Thomas P. Stafford.

Gemini 5 will carry 400 pounds of maneuvering fuel, with 250 pounds maximum allotted for the satellite-chasing experiment.

Dr. Charles A. Berry, director of medical operations, said close medical watch will be kept on Cooper and Conrad throughout the journey. He said both will exercise regularly with a stretchable cord. Similar exercise by McDvitt and White is believed responsible for their good conditions after their four-day flight.

In a new medical experiment, Conrad will wear pneumatic cuffs on the upper part of each leg. Throughout the entire flight they will be inflated for two minutes, deflated for four minutes, inflated for two minutes etc. Purpose will be to try to keep the cardiovascular — heart and blood distribution — system functioning as close to normal as possible in weightlessness. For comparison, Cooper will not wear the cuffs.

Asked why neither planned to leave the orbiting spacecraft as White did, Cooper said:: "After the EVA — Extra-Vehicular Activity — was successful on Gemini 4, there was nothing further to be gained on our flight. Plus the fact that it takes a great deal more equipment and space to do anything like that."

The astronauts were to be kept busy by such experiments as:

— Looking for missile firing from Cape Kennedy; Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., and Holloman Air Force Base, N.M., and aiming detection instruments at their exhaust plumes to obtain infrared data that might help in developing guidance systems for steering men to the moon and back. Other targets for the infrared sensors will be the moon, stars, planets and such early hot spots as volcanoes, forest fires and smokestacks.

— Conversing with a fellow astronaut, Navy Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter, who will be in a diving bell 200 feet beneath the surface of the Pacific off La Jolla, Calif., as part of the Operation Sealab II oceanic research project.

— Photographing celestial and early objects and weather patterns. The photos will have scientific, geological topographical and meteorological interest.

'Code Of Conduct' School Has Grim Purpose

TAUNTED BY "Communist guards," GIs crawl on hands and knees during a simulated "death march" at "Prison Camp Number Five" in Korea. At the camp, built by the U. S. army as a replica of Communist prison camps of Korean War, men of the army's front-line Second Infantry Division are put through a rigorous five-hour course as preparation for possible capture in repetition of Korean fighting. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

UNDERGOING REALISTIC interrogation, Sp/4 Ralph Kreis gets some rough treatment from "Communists" at the Code of Conduct School at U. S. army replica of Communist Korean War prison camp in Korea. The "guards" are Koreans attached to the Second Infantry Division, which is giving all its men the five-hour training course. Kreis is one of the troops who act out skits as part of the course.

Monroe, La., August 15, 1965 1B

Members of the Second Infantry Division serving along the uneasy truce line between North and South Korea are being schooled to help them avoid some of the pitfalls of brainwashing which they may encounter if captured by the Communists.

By CHARLES FLOOD

PRISON CAMP No. 5, Korea (AP) — It looks just like a Communist prison camp, the kind in which 7,000 Americans were held during the Korean War. But it was built by the U.S. Army and it's a "code of conduct" school.

At the moment, all men of the 2nd Infantry Division are going through the school. The division mans the uneasy truce line between North and South Korea, and the school has a grim purpose. It was set up to prevent a recurrence of some of the successful brainwashing of American prisoners that occurred during the Korean War. The code of conduct, a set of rules for prisoner behavior, grew out of the investigations of cooperation by some American prisoners with their Communist captors.

Here's how the school works:

A contingent of 120 men arrives by truck at 7 a.m. in a misty clearing just north of the Imjin river in the American forward area.

The GIs dismount and look around, under the impression they are to attend a lecture on how to behave if captured. A sergeant wearing an American uniform orders them into a formation and they obey.

The sergeant gives them "about face," and the unarmed Americans turn — only to find smoke grenades being thrown at them by Koreans dressed in Communist uniform and carrying submachine guns.

Interrogation

Rapidly surrounded and having been told earlier not to attempt to leave the area, the GIs are forced to kneel while their "captors" interrogate them.

"What's your name, dog!" shouts one of the Communist-uniformed GIs who, along with Koreans attached to the division, play the part of the captors. The cadreman grabs the collar of a young private who is kneeling with his hands behind his neck, and yanks him to his feet.

"Your name, dog, your name!"

The young recruit gives his name. A cadreman appears behind the boy and simultaneously both he and the other "captor" slam their elbows into the prisoner.

"Rank? Serial number?"

The boy gives them, as he is allowed to do under the code of conduct, and the cadreman nods approvingly. In the same rhythm he asks, "Date of birth? Place of birth?"

"You told me your place of birth, didn't you?" the interrogator says, chuckling.

"I wasn't supposed to," the boy says.

"I know you weren't supposed to," the other says. "All you're supposed to tell me is name, rank, serial number and date of birth. By telling me your place of birth you've betrayed your government. They won't want you back now, after you've done that. You might as well go ahead and tell us everything."

Different Approach

A short way down the kneeling rank another member of the school's faculty tries a different approach.

"I can tell from your voice you're from near Boston, aren't you?"

The GI says that he is.

"Well, I am too, buddy. I'm not going to harass a guy from near my home town. Come on out of ranks and have a smoke. You don't have to go through any more of this stuff."

He lights a cigarette for the relieved soldier. They chat. The GI tells him what unit he's from, how long he's been with the unit, how the roads are, how they like the new commanding officer.

"That's great," the interrogator says after a few minutes. "You've told me what I wanted to know. Put out that butt and get back into ranks."

Prisoners pass through a gate into a barbed-wire compound containing a crude hut with an interrogation desk. The men stand ankle-deep in water in a rice paddy while a 'commissar' climbs a 20-foot machine-gun watchtower to give them their first indoctrination speech.

The commissar tells them they are here because Wall Street capitalists have sent them to fight at the ends of the earth for soldier's pay while others get rich.

Following this speech, the GIs cease to be "prisoners." They are given a ten-minute break, and then take seats on benches at the side of a hill inside Prison Camp No. Five.

"You are sitting five and a half miles from the DMZ,' one of the lecturers tells them, referring to the 4,000-yard wide demilitarized zone separating North and South Korea. "Any one of you could be a prisoner within the next week."

The GI audience is shown the International Red Cross questionnaire which all prisoners of war must fill out in order to receive mail and packages from home.

Cautioned

"During the Korean War," a sergeant tells them, "the Communists made fake Red Cross questionnaires with lots of questions that would give them military information they wanted to know. Look at this questionnaire closely. If anything different from this is put in front of you, don't fill it out."

Lectures on how to organize a prison compound for activities ranging from sanitation to escape are punctuated by skits acted out with surprising skill by the same GIs who played the "captor" roles.

Special Service For The Sick

Various types of medical equipment such as hospital beds, wheel chairs and other items are provided without charge here for use in the home through the Sick Loan Shelf, operated by the Temple B'Nai Israel Sisterhood. It is a service that has helped many in time of need.

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Suppose you had a serious accident and needed such medical equipment as a hospital bed, wheel chair or lift. Did you know there is an organization in Monroe that loans out such items to anyone in Ouachita Parish, free of charge?

This service is known as the Sick Loan Shelf, operated by the Temple B'Nai Israel Sisterhood as part of their welfare program.

Any parish resident — "rich or poor, white or colored" — can borrow this equipment up to three months without having to pay any charges.

Mrs. Ronald Blate, current Sick Loan Shelf chairman, explained that all Twin Cities doctors know of the service and will recommend it for some of their patients.

Letter From Doctor

"These people bring a letter from their doctor stating that they need certain equipment, and if we have it, we loan them whatever they need," Mrs. Blate said.

"From its very beginning, all members of the Sisterhood have participated in the program," said Mrs. Edna Levi, who was in charge of the Sick Loan Shelf for 12 years, and is now permanent co-chairman.

"All the people who help with the Sick Loan Shelf are strictly volunteers," Mrs. Levi pointed out, "and receive no pay whatsoever for their work."

The Sick Loan Shelf now includes about $6,000 worth of equipment, "but this is still not enough to cover the demands," said Mrs. Levi.

"There is not a day in the week that we don't receive a number of requests and help from three to six people," added Mrs. Blate.

Equipment In Stock

Equipment now in the Sisterhood's collection includes hospital beds, pulleys, electric heating lamps, several kinds of walkers, walking canes, crutches, bedpans and urinals, toilet commodes, wheel chairs, vaporizers, side rails and one lift.

Necessary funds to operate the Sick Loan Shelf come exclusively from donations. These contributions come mostly from people who have borrowed equipment for themselves or their family or friends, and are given for memorials, appreciation of use and on such occasions as birthdays. Engraved cards are sent by the committee chairman to families notifying them when a memorial has been given to the Shelf.

The donations are usually enough to sustain the operation of the service, but more new equipment is always needed.

Mrs. Blate said, "We hate to have to turn people down when they need to borrow something, but sometimes we just don't have it."

Equipment is usually loaned for three months, then it can be renewed if no one is on the waiting list.

First Location

The Sick Loan Shelf's first home was a small one-room building located behind the old Health Center on St. John Street.

"The Sisterhood started out in 1946 with practically nothing—just old, used equipment," said Mrs. Levi.

The little building was just a storage area, with no room at all for office space. During the first years of the project, two volunteers from the Sisterhood would sit outside in a car during the specified check-out time, waiting for people to come by and pick up the equipment.

Destruction of the tiny building forced the group to move their equipment to the Old Jewish Temple on Jackson Street, where it remained for about two or three years. This arrangement still did not prove quite satisfactory, so the Sick Loan Shelf was transferred in 1963 to Ferd Levi Stationery Company for storage, so that Mrs. Levi, who was then chairman, could personally supervise the loans.

For 12 years, the equipment stayed at Ferd Levi, with the collection growing so big that it practically took a full-time person to handle it. Mrs. Levi kept up with the loans, assisted a great deal by Mrs. A. L. Griffing, a store employee. William D. Hunter, a Negro porter at Ferd Levi's did most of the repair and maintenance work on the hospital equipment and helped with moving during that time. The items were stored on the second floor of the store building.

Equipment Moved

On the first day of this year, the equipment was moved to the new Temple on Orell Drive. Lending important assistance to the moving operations were Mrs. Louis Marcovitz, Mrs. I. S. Marx, Mrs. Joe Marx Jr. and Mrs. Bert Heinberg, in addition to other regular volunteer workers.

Now the equipment is stored in about four different places, as the Sick Loan Shelf workers try to build an extra room that will be used only to house these items.

"The majority of the people are so appreciative of this service, said Mrs. Levi.

It's main advantage to borrowers is that it enables the patient to recover in his own home rather than in the hospital.

"Most of the people who use items from the Sick Loan Shelf tell us they just don't know what they would have done without it," Mrs. Levi continued, "and that they would have never been able to buy or rent this equipment without us."

Since all work is done on a voluntary basis, the Sick Loan Shelf group does not have the facilities to deliver the equipment, but the Sisterhood members say this does not create much of a problem.

In the very beginning, the Shelf only made its facilities available to the poor, but later the leaders decided to enlarge its scope to include everyone in the parish.

"No matter how wealthy a person is, he does not like to spend money on this type of equipment," Mrs. Levi said, "and for this reason, the Sick Loan Shelf is one of the biggest projects in Monroe.

TWO CHIEF workers for the Sick Loan Shelf, sponsored by the Sisterhood of Temple B'Nai Israel, are Mrs. A. L. Griffing, left, and Mrs. Edna Levi. Mrs. Levi was chairman of the service for 12 years and is now permanent co-chairman. Mrs. Griffing, one of her employes, helped a great deal with the loaning of the hospital equipment while it was stored at Mrs. Levi's business establishment. The two ladies are shown here checking over some of the Sick Loan Shelf records. (Staff Photo by John Fogleman)

Vote Law Challenged

A judge once said he had formerly held the opinion that if an accused person could not be convicted in court there was no use in bringing him to trial but that he had later changed his mind and had come to believe every person who apparently was guilty should be brought to trial, regardless of the chances of conviction. His final opinion was that the law should do all it could to effect justice. We share that opinion.

The recently-enacted federal law granting illiterates the right to vote, even if they cannot cast their own ballots and must use a substitute voter, and an effort in New Orleans to strike down that law is a case in point.

A. P. Gallinghouse, Orleans Parish registrar of voters, filed suit for an immediate court order barring enforcement of the act, primarily designed to make it easier for Negroes to vote. He also asked a ruling on its constitutionality.

This was the first legal challenge of the entire act, although a court test of a provision which waves English language literacy requirements was asked by a Brooklyn couple shortly after President Johnson signed the bill.

Gallinghouse's suit came nine days after voting registrars went into nine counties in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama and began enrolling Negroes as voters.

Gallinghouse's petition said the right of states to prescribe qualifications for state and local elections was affirmed in the 24th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which was adopted last year. This amendment banned the poll tax in federal elections.

The suit also claims the federal act violates the 10th, 14th and 17th amendments.

Named as defendants were the federal government, Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, Census Bureau Director A. Ross Eckler and Warren B. Irons, executive director of the Civil Service Commission.

If it were possible, it would have seemed wise to name the members of the United States Supreme Court, so they could be enjoined from abrogating and violating provisions of the Constitution, but since court members hold themselves above the Constitution and declare they have a right to change it(which would, in effect, invalidate our Constitution), such action would be futile.

The provision against which the Brooklyn couple filed suit was intended primarily to give Puerto Ricans who cannot speak English the right to vote in the United States. Puerto Ricans commonly vote along with Negroes, particularly in New York.

Governor John McKeithen of Louisiana told a news conference he wholeheartedly supported Gallinghouse's petition.

Louisiana requires a literacy test which was banned under the law.

"The matter is now in the court, where it rightfully should be," Gallinghouse said.

In our view, the new law is both unconstitutional and grossly unwise. This being true, it is the duty of the state to fight it all the way down the line in the courts.

Bad Cotton Situation

With a production potential that probably could supply the entire world, the United States finds its total sales of cotton lower than they were 50 years ago. There has been an improvement in the price over that half-century but it has been no greater than the general price increase.

In that period 40 to 50 years ago when both cotton production and sales were at their highest, raising cotton consisted largely of hard work. Horses and mules pulled the plows, most of which were the so-called "walking" variety. That is, the man who did the plowing walked behind the team and plow instead of riding on a vehicle. Chopping and hoeing were done entirely by hand and there were no flame-throwers nor chemicals to stop the growth of grass and weeds.

Cotton production and sales then sometimes reached as high as 16 million bales a year. That was about the time agricultural agents were just beginning to teach farmers scientific methods and before the federal government began interfering with production. Farmers then were virtually as free as the birds which flew over their lands. They could raise any crops they chose and as much as they chose and could do what they pleased with it.

Since that time, United States and world populations have grown at a tremendous rate. Uses of cotton have increased in a vast number of ways. Increased population alone should have made it possible to sell more than twice as many bales of cotton as were sold prior to the 1920s. If we had doubled our cotton production and sales, we could now be producing and selling 32 million bales a year.

Even that amount would not have begun to tax our capacity. There is little doubt that the United States could easily produce 50 million bales a year and it might reach 100 million bales without taking up too much of the land that now lies idle.

In the days when almost all farm work was done by hand and with horses and mules, about half a bale of cotton to the acre was considered a good average. Now two bales to the acre is nothing extraordinary and sometimes as much as three bales to the acre is produced.

Use of tractors and other improved cultivation methods have made it possible for one man to do the work formerly done by 10 or 20 men. Machine pickers have largely replaced human labor. Formerly, most of the people of this country were engaged in agricultural work. Now the percentage of farmers is low and is continually dropping. Even so, this small number of farmers is held down in production by government control.

The department of agriculture previously had expected domestic consumption of cotton this year to total about 9.6 million bales and exports about five million. With the last crop year already at an end, latest indications are that domestic consumption will total only 9.1 million bales and exports only about four million. As a result, the carryover of upland cotton on August 1 of this year was estimated at 14.2 million bales, an increase of about two million bales over last year. Thus, the carryover is more than an entire year's sales. This is the highest carryover since the record high of 14.4 million bales in 1956.

The almost insurmountable problem now facing cotton producers was aggravated by the law under which farmers operated in 1964 and 1965. Now Congress is in the process of trying to correct an almost impossible situation, although there is some hope that better legislation can be enacted this year.

Government control, crop limitation and high prices have almost wrecked our cotton export trade.

Parish Anti Poverty

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

We followed with admiration and satisfaction the manner in which the Ouachita Parish Police Jury withstood the pressures of those who sought to have it rescind its action in regards to the Anti-Poverty Program for Ouachita Parish. We give members praise and applaud them for that stand.

As you may know, since its inception the American Labor movement has been striving to banish poverty from our midst — through our trade organization, effective collective bargaining and legislative efforts. That has been our historic objective. We are still wedded to that position and subscribe the purpose of the Economic Opportunity Act as it proposes to open to "everyone the opportunity for education and training, the opportunity to work, and the opportunity to live in decency and dignity."

Some, we know, do not agree, and object to this program mainly because of Federal assistance. Yet, they did not appear to petition other local governmental agencies when they accepted Federal funds to construct new highways; to deepen the channel in the Ouachita River; to expand a municipal airport; to build a new sanitary sewage treatment plant; to add new residence halls at the college; to build a new hospital; or to assist in many other programs. Let us not be misinterpreted. We also supported those programs and believe that it took men of vision and planning to bring them about. However, when it came time to participate in a program designed to assist those at the very bottom of the economic structure in Ouachita Parish, Federal assistance became somewhat sinister, somewhat evil and somewhat foreign. Why? Perhaps, it is due to a lack of understanding as to just what this program is designed to do and just who it will benefit.

Looking briefly at poverty in America as it now exists, studies reveal that of the 47 million families in the United States in 1962, some 9.5 million had incomes below $3,000 annually. Per capita income for the 35 million men, women and children in these families was only $590, against $1,900 for the nation as a whole.

While poverty and unemployment are twice as prevalent among minority groups, about 78 per cent of all the poor are white. The poor, for the most part, lack education; more than three-fifths of the heads of poor families have only a grade school education or less. Of the poor, 54 per cent live in cities, 30 per cent live in rural areas and 16 per cent live on the land. Over 50 per cent of all farm families are poor by U.S. standards.

One-third of the poor families include people past retirement age. One-quarter of the poor are in families without a breadwinner, because of death, disability or desertion. We applaud your stand, because you did not say "no" to people who are in the classification of poor through no fault of their own.

Poverty is costly to the nation, to the state, and to the parish in crime, juvenile delinquency, ignorance, broken homes, welfare costs, urban and rural deterioration and slower economic progress. We applaud your stand, for as you must know, the cost of combating these problems is far greater than the cost of seeking to eliminate their cause.

There is little doubt of the nation's ability to end poverty, and this program is an effort to break the poverty cycle, to help the poor to help themselves, to mobilize national and community resources to eradicate the causes of poverty and to equip the poor for today's highly skilled jobs.

So again we say, we are encouraged by your action and pledge our full support in the struggle against want.

Wholesale Tax

(Note - The following letter was addressed to Gov. McKeithen and a copy sent to this newspaper for publication)

Monroe, La.

Your 2 per cent Louisiana Wholesale Tax will result in two things:

1. Retailers will go outside Louisiana to make purchases because the tax cannot apply in interstate commerce.

2. This will reduce business of wholesalers within Louisiana who are required to collect the tax, with resultant loss of jobs in Louisiana.

All you have succeeded in doing with the 2 per cent Wholesale Tax is in running business away from Louisiana, AND you will not have any net gain in the 2 per cent Tax as a whole!

Why? Simply because retailers are not as dumb as you think! They will just quietly buy their supplies and materials outside Louisiana! The 2 per cent Louisiana Wholesale Tax will not apply, AND there is not a thing you or your legislators can do about it, because you cannot legislate Louisiana inbound taxes in interstate commerce!

As stated before, all your 2 per cent Wholesale Tax has accomplished is running needed jobs and business out of Louisiana!! How much business have you run off? Only time will tell! A conservative guess is 300 to 600 million a year! Fewer jobs in Louisiana, and more jobs outside Louisiana!!!

You claim you want more industry in Louisiana, The 2 per cent Louisiana Wholesale Tax refutes that claim!

Divine Guidance

Winnsboro, La.

To the Editor:

I, in all of my 37 years, never once wrote to a newspaper before but I find myself doing so now because of an article in this mornings paper written by Mr. T. Y. Harp of Mer Rouge. Being a woman naturally I can't belong to the K.K.K. but I wish to the Good Lord I could. I fully agree that one bad apple does not make the whole lot rotten.

Furthermore if the K.K.K. is to be investigated then why not the NAACP? Also CORE and other organizations. What is in time to keep the committee from investigating our Churches, restaurants hotels and eventually our homes?

One question must be asked by others as well as myself. Where does it end? What can I as an individual do to better the situation? In voting for the right people for office, you'll say. How can you always tell? How can you be sure that just because a man says he will do something for the country, the community or the town that he sincerely means to do a job that needs doing or is promising what he knows he cannot possibly do.

In closing this one thought I would like to leave with you. For this, and all other states and nations ever to be at peace we must turn again to God, ask His divine guidance in every step we take. Until we do none of us will be at peace even within our own hearts, and until that is accomplished there can be no peace anywhere.

Miss Lucille L. Jones

The Great Day

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Like the Honorable Strom Thurmond, last Friday, to me was not a great day; it was more of a day of infamy, partly of its being the 20th anniversary, (if it can be so called) of the Hiroshima catastrophe, and, last week, the complete abdication of the Congress, Justice Department and the man in the white house to the tirade of the Warren Court, Martin Luther King and other liars and beatniks.

I am proud to see one or two instances where there is a little Justice being administered—One in Alexandria, Virginia, where the Honorable U.S. District Judge Oren R. Lewis ruled illegal Saturday a Plan to merge a Negro and a White Junior High School in South Arlington. Another, the Honorable U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., who ruled that "civil disobedience" under the guise of "civil rights" must be prosecuted. This, in connection with the cases of 167 demonstrators arrested last March in Montgomery, Alabama. Although their attorneys had tried to appeal to the federal court, Judge Johnson sent them back to the local courts as being within their jurisdiction.

How different these two cases from those generally mentioned in the papers around the country; usually, these marchers are given free access to the streets, highways, sidewalks and buildings, where they are allowed to take over the local, State or Federal avenues of travel, to yell, clap hands, dance, even go through their ridiculous antics of praying, moaning and what have you, all for the Benefit of TV. And, too, they have enjoyed full license in this sort of agitation until now. Peace Officers have been hamstrung in their efforts to preserve peace, due to federal interference in all ways from Judges, the so-called Justice department all the way up to the fellow in the white house in (Sodom) who directed Federal Highway No. 80 relegated to the march from Selma Alabama to Montgomery, and, Federalized the Alabama National Guard to see the debacle enforced.

From the above, anyone can see why, instead of a great day last Friday was, just what the day was — a day when the vote-hungry politicians put over a bill to allow anyone to vote who was alive. Chicago has been voting dead ones for some time, but I have no way of knowing how this bill will affect things there. You call it Justice — I have another name for it.

In 1945, the U.S. stopped rationing of gasoline, fuel and some food.

In 1947, Great Britain ended her 200-year rule over India.

Schlesinger Size Is Whacked Down

EXCUSE ME IF I seem a little smug about Arthur Meier Schlesinger Jr., former White House aide, would - be historian, and hatchet man par excellence, Some dozen years ago, I devoted a good bit of time doing research into Professor Schlesinger. The product of this work was an article which showed that Harvard's pride had little to recommend him in the eyes of any reasonably impartial observer. I need not add that I was roundly berated by the Liberal Establishment for being unduly cruel to what it then considered its own spokesman.

Now that same Establishment is beating Mr. Schlesinger over the head for having, to use an inelegant phrase, bum - rapped Secretary of State Dean Rusk. In typical manner, Mr. Schlesinger ascribed words and thoughts to the late President Kennedy which put Mr. Rusk in a very dubious light. Though I hold no brief for our present Secretary of State, I still feel that what Mr. Schlesinger did was not quite cricket. I also wonder whether or not the Schlesinger recall of his conversations with President Kennedy was accurate.

I still remember Mr. Schlesinger's remark about the writing of history, made years ago. He was saying that he preferred writing about the past. "All the witnesses are dead," he noted. "There's no one to pop up and say, 'You were wrong—I was there.'" In the instant case, no one like, let us say, John F. Kennedy.

BUT I WOULD be dubious of Mr. Schleslinger's pronouncements on other grounds. At the time of the so - called Truman Scandals, Mr. Schlesinger took it on himself to attack the integrity and honesty of Herbert Hoover. Mr. Hoover had been the target of much bitter and unfair criticism — but no one had ever attempted to smear him with the charge of dishonesty or bad faith. In his attack, however, Mr. Schlesinger stated flatly that Mr. Hoover had condoned government corruption — the Teapot Dome scandal specifically — during the early 1920s.

"Far from objecting to official corruption then," the Artful Arthur wrote, "Mr. Hoover sat in entire complacency as Secretary of Commerce, while his colleague, the Secretary of the Interior, sought to loot the government . . . Not only did Mr. Hoover fail to make any public objection to Secretary of the Interior Fall, or to Attorney General Harry Daugherty . . . but . . . eight days after Fall's hasty resignation . . . Hoover wrote him "a warm letter of commendation. These, Mr. Schlesinger said blandly, were the "indisputable facts."

THESE "INDISPUTABLE facts" were, however, of Arthur Schlesinger's feverish invention. Secretary Fall's resignation was not "hasty" but publicly announced two months before its effective date. At that time, there was not the slightest hint of scandal attached to his name. In point of fact, the New York Times editorially lauded Secretary Fall for the job he did most of official Washington. Not until months later, when he had left the government, did the first charges against him lead to a full investigation and the disclosure of the fraud surrounding the Teapot fraud. And it was not until by that time President Harding had pushed prosecution — with a courage which no Democratic President since then has been able to match.

Mr. Schlesinger, however, was hardly troubled by being caught with his facts down. I have yet to hear that he apologized to Mr. Hoover or in any way acknowledged his error in this gratuitous piece of attempted character assassination. Nor did he ever retract a false charge of perjury against a witness who appeared before a Congressional committee — though others, like Joseph Alsop, withdrew the same accusation when confronted with the official transcript of testimony.

There is no way to determine the accuracy of Mr. Schlesinger's alleged quotations in the case of Secretary of State Rusk. But the record stands in the two cases I cited. There are others, but no matter. What does matter is the influence Mr. Schlesinger still wields in the Liberal Establishment. Until he went at Mr. Rusk, the junior Schlesinger was considered a perfect gentle scholar — and even today no one but rude louts like myself take him to task. Had a conservative Senator acted in like manner Mr. Schlesinger and his claque would have shouted "McCarthyism" until they were hoarse. Which only proves that it ain't what you do, but where you hang your political hat that counts.

Marines Bearing Neutrals' Wrath

JOIN THE MARINES, and get on the Hate List — not of Montezumans, Tripolitanians or Iwo Jimans, but of fellow Americans. Let us quickly grant that Marines are capable of misconduct, just as editors, priests, and candlestick makers are capable of misconduct. The question is whether the ambivalence of our mission to South Viet Nam is breeding neurotic self-doubts, the effect of which is to shoot our own soldiers in the back.

"This is what the war in Viet Nam is all about," a CBS commentator reported to the country last week, as his cameraman panned to a shot of an old man, gibbering piteously. "The old and the very young. The Marines have burned this old couple's cottage because fire was coming from there (piteous screams are heard) . . . The people that are left — (to cameraman) come this way — the people that are left are like this woman here (old lady, in black pyjamas, humped over and wailing with melancholy walks by) . . . the very old.

"It first appeared that the Marines had been sniped at and that a few houses were made to pay. Shortly after, an officer told me he had orders to go in and level the string of hamlets that surround Cam Ne village; 150 homes were leveled in retaliation for a burst of gunfire. (Marines shown wielding flamethrowers.)

"IN VIET NAM, like everywhere else in Asia, property, a home, is everything. A man lives with his family on ancestral land. His parents are buried nearby. (Camera pans to infant, crying.) Their spirit is part of his holding. If there were Vietcong in the hamlets, they were long gone — alerted by the roar of the amphibious tractors and the heavy barrage of rocket fire laid down before the troops moved in. The women and the old men who remain will never forget that August afternoon. The day's operation burned down a hundred and fifty houses, wounded three women; killed one baby; wounded one Marine; and netted . . . these four prisoners. Four old men who could not answer questions put to them in English. Four old men who have no idea what an I.D. card is (one of the four old men was approximately 20 years old). To a Vietnamese peasant, whose home is gone, that means a lifetime of backbreaking labor. It will take more than Presidential promises to convince him that we are on his side. This (lugubriously) is Morley Safer, CBS News, near the village of Cam Ne."

Well, it turns out that most of the breakbreaking work had been done not to create pastoral homes where old men and little children commune peacefully with their ancestors, but in constructing, in the words of Foreign Correspondent Jack Langguth of the New York Times, "tunnels, with which the village was honeycombed, some of them concrete, which the marine commanders 'considered to be far more elaborate than mere protection of their homes would require,' the spokesman said. In most cases, the huts were set afire when flamethrowers and grenades, used to seal tunnels and trenches, ignited connecting houses, according to the Marines' report."

DO WE REALLY intend to have a team from Good Housekeeping attached to every military unit of the United States, to pass on whether the Marines are fighting the war according to the highest standards of American moral hygiene? American soldiers are being killed in South Viet Nam every day. South Vietnamese are being killed there every day, and tortured beyond recognition by an enemy that cares nothing at all for the sanctity of the hamlet, or of the home, or of the ancestor, or of the spirit that is a part of the peasant's holding. The Vietcong's highly developed techniques for conscripting parts of the local population to cooperating in the conspiracy to deprive the whole of their freedom is one aspect of the military program: to be met by techniques studied and developed at places like Parris Island; not at the executive suites of television offices.

SUNDAY POEM

The Lord had a job for me,
but I had so much to do,
I said, "You get somebody else — or wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out, but He seemed to get along;
But I felt kinda sneakin' like, 'cause I know'd I done Him wrong.
One day I needed the Lord
— Needed Him myself—
Needed Him right away,
And He never answered me at all, But I could hear Him say
Down in my accusin' heart:
"I'se got too much to do,
Yet get somebody else or wait till I get through."

FROM OUTER SPACE

With all of those Unidentified Flying Objects around and — worse luck we haven't had the good fortune to see one yet — it brings to mind the story of the case of a Memphis, Tenn. man.

He's wondering if somebody from outer space is trying to tell him anything.

After consideration, though, he is trying to laugh off the idea, but it's a nervous laugh.

A while back, it seems, he bought a new portable stereo set and took it home. It worked fine. Next morning, soon as he got up, he turned on the stereo. The record played all right, but there was something else in the background. A weird sound like something from the twilight zone.

The sound grew louder and he called an engineer at a local television station, who suggested he may be picking up a ham operator's signal. He went back and they were voices all right, and they were saying something. But he couldn't understand a word — couldn't even tell whether it was a foreign language.

He tinkered with the stereo for a few days, but the eerie sound kept coming — always between 7 and 8 a.m.

Sometime after that, he purchased an electric organ. The next morning when he got up and turned it on — what do you think. Right. Weird noises from the electric organ.

He turned on the stereo. Ditto. Somewhat shakily, he turned on the television set. Still more creepy noises, but not the same creepy noises as those from the organ and the stereo.

The man about half way figures it's just some kind of electronic freak — but he's not sure and neither are we.

After all, we believe in these reports — or some of them — of the UFOs — even if the Air Force and the Great Society don't.

HERE AND THERE

WHO'S spending the most? There has been an awful lot of criticism — and rightly so — of the cost of the Rayburn House Office Building in Washington. It has been cited as the high water mark of riotous spending — costing $76 per square foot of "usable space." Have you checked the cost of the new office for President Johnson in the Federal Building at Austin, Texas? Reports say the 77-by-100 foot top floor office is costing about $8 million. This figures out to about $1,038 a square foot . . .

JUST FOR the record, in case you thought you were getting a tax cut, look at this. The recent medicare program signed by the President is going to take your tax cut and then some. This year you pay a maximum tax of $174 for Social Security. Next year, with the unnecessary and wasteful medicare program, the maximum tax to be paid by employee and employer will jump to $277.20 . . . .

SPEAKING of medicare, there's a good chance that such a clamor will arise to spread the benefits among those who will pay the bill, that such a program will be approved. In such an event, this could lead straight to the socialized medicine so feared — and rightly so — by the American Medical Association. Then, too, there will be a lot of disappointments down the line as the beneficiaries of medicare come to realize it will not cover all their medical expenses. Poll after poll has shown that all too many people were sold on medicare without realizing it was not a comprehensive plan to pay all their costs. But it's too late now . . .

SURPRISINGLY, bees cause more deaths than snakes, according to health authorities. The reason: many persons suffer a swift and fatal allergic reaction to bee venom. Victims, however, are usually forewarned of their allergy by severe reactions to several stings preceding the fatal one. A person who experiences extreme headache, nausea or dizziness after a bee sting, should see his doctor immediately . . .

NOTE TO THE WOMEN — Meredith C. Hough, perfume company president, points out that changes take place when perfume is applied to the skin. A fragrance may bloom and become richer and warmer on one woman, but lose its beguiling characteristics or even disappear entirely when it is worn by another woman.

IN PARIS, when Henri Durant failed to come home one night recently, his worried wife sent telegrams to four of Henri's closest friends. She received four almost identical replies: "Don't worry. Henri is with me."

THE LIGHTER SIDE

HAVE YOU ever wondered where are all the old fashioned girls? They're home with their first husbands.

JUNK is anything that lies around in your way for 10 years and then is thrown away two weeks before you need it.

THIS SIGN WAS seen on a garbage truck: "Satisfaction guaranteed or Your Garbage Back."

A FRIEND MADE this observation: "I know a man who is so conservative that he won't fish from the left bank of the river.

A SIGN ON A shoemaker shop: "We doctor shoes, heel them, attend their dyeing and save their soles."

NEW TEST? Scientists have discovered that mosquitoes prefer people who are warm, moist and sexy. This probably will lead to mosquito tests instead of screen tests in Hollywood.

Hay Fever Season

That time of the year that a lot of people dread — known as the hay fever season—is just about upon us. In fact, a little booklet that came in the mail the other day had some interesting information about the disorder. It says more than 7½ million Americans are affected.

The season opens with a thunder of sneezes and tearful eyes about the middle of August and generally lasts until the first weed-killing frost arrives.

The most common cause of hay fever is ragweed. It was given its name in 1819 by Dr. John Bostock, a London physician. He observed that other English victims beside himself began to weep and sneeze in June, at the start of the haying season, and that the symptoms ended when the hay was stacked. The name has remained, although the outbreaks have nothing at all to do with hay.

Some early treatments and others through the years are interesting to note.

In 1831, British physician John Elliotson, advocated hypnotism as the remedy. Until the 1800's thirsty leeches were used for bleeding, often until the patient was hardly strong enough to breathe at all.

The 1618 edition of the London Pharmacopedia recommended a diet of fox's lungs.

In the late 19th century, the great hay fever cure was nasal surgery. X-ray therapy was also in vogue. In the 18th century, Sir John Floyer advocated cold baths.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, while a professor at Harvard Medical School, was once asked by a patient: "Is there any cure for hay fever?" "Yes," he answered. "Gravel taken about 8 feet deep."

That's still about the best advice today as scientists still are looking for a cure. However, health associations have put out the following common rules that might help:

1. Don't drink alcohol. It tends to dilate blood vessels, as pollens do.
2. Don't fight with your spouse, or the children. Emotional tension is believed to set off some attacks of hay fever.
3. Don't over-exert, get fatigued, or change from one temperature to another drastically.
4. Don't eat spiced foods, don't smoke and don't swim in a chlorinated pool.
5. Don't cut flowers, garden, or paint.
6. Don't go for a ride in the country.

And in case you are interested, here are a few of the more common types of weed and grass that cause havoc during the hay fever season:

Short ragweed, giant ragweed, western ragweed, southern ragweed, cocklebur, marsh elder, false ragweed, slender false ragweed, annual sage, prairie sage, safebrush, tallwormwood, pigweed, spiny amaranth, lamb's quarters, firebrush, Russian thistle, bermuda grass, bluegrass, timothy, orchard grass, corn, rye grass and hemp.

The best thing, however, is pray for an early frost.

AIN'T IT SO

It is not sufficient to have great qualities; we must be able to make proper use of them.

FROM OLLA

Mrs. Kate Meador of Olla, a retired primary teacher, who has written poems through the years, sent along the following:

THE HANDIWORK OF GOD

I walked through the garden
Over the newly turned sod.
I saw the wonders of nature;
The handiwork of God.
Sow a little seed, no matter
How tiny it may be,
Give it time and a plant
You will soon see.
It might be a small plant or a large tree,
But its growing in the sod
Proves the wonders of nature,
The handiwork of God.

Twin Cities Week In Review

Great Challenges Stimulate Efforts

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Great challenges, sages say, demand and must receive our finest efforts, whether as individuals or collectively.

But there was no such philosophizing in the Twin Cities last week. The challenges were there, and it was action, not words that went into the breech.

Developments were breaking on some of the two-town area's most perplexing problems, each involving important bearing on the future.

TYLER

Citizen researchers appointed by the Ouachita Parish Police Jury offered their long-considered and apparently eagerly-awaited feasibility report on establishment of industrial districts. There were turns into new legal channels on Monroe city school integration and the proposed sale of bonds to expand that system. The lately-placid waters of the federal anti-poverty issue were roiled anew, and theory became practice in a city planning effort designed to shape the Monroe of 20 years hence.

Challenges, indeed, and worthy of the wit of Solomon.

Rather a surprise to some observers was the recommendation of "no feasible" by Chairman Hugh Vick of the jury-named industrial study committee.

The report, read verbatim to assure no personal emphasis, listed indigenous benefits accruing to industries by location here (manpower, stable government, raw materials, etc.), and in effect de - emphasized tax exemptions as inducement to come or stay.

Three firms had petitioned for placement into industrial districts for exemption from certain future service taxes. Though each qualifies under state law for such treatment, Vick said, they likely would be joined in similar petitions by 16 other parish-located industries, which also qualify.

Assessment Loss

The loss in taxable assessment to the parish could exceed $40 million, the chairman said.

Jurors, who must make the decision, received the report Tuesday night. They withheld formal action on it until their first September meeting.

Formal action was taken, however, for the third time on anti - poverty, when the jury voted 16-2, calling for formation of a "responsible" organization to administer federal funds in a search for poverty and possible remedial measures later.

Leslie Hamm of ward five, who said he has been the target of leaflets holding him and several other jurors responsible for the possible inception of the program here, stressed that the vote was not on the merits of the program.

Other support for the "responsible" group was originated or announced during the week by the West Monroe Civitan Club and the Ouachita Parish Central Trades & Labor Council. It has been endorsed as well by the Ouachita Parish Farm Bureau.

Meanwhile, federal figures were included in the ciphering on a suit filed the week before to integrate city schools and-or halt the City of Mornoe's $6 million bond sale.

While Judge Ben C. Dawkins revealed that he had denied a restrainer on the sale, he said a Monroe hearing will be held at the "first available opportunity" on desegregation. He conceded that, because of workload, the hearing might be as late as mid-October. A new move by Negro attorneys had asked total integration by school opening, Sept. 7.

The city council Tuesday accepted a bid on the bonds of 3.6922 per cent and plans delivery of the notes in New York in 60 days.

Speaking of New York, Monroe may never be that big (and in some eyes, this is just fine) but a plan was kicked off last week which could make her every bit as "urbane," on a smaller scale.

Door-to-door checks were begun in the downtown area to determine virtually every jot of center-city's present and future economic potential. Due to take some 18 months, findings will "guide developments to continue this area's being the focal point of the community." The project, being financed by downtown property - owners, with the city, is coordinated by the Chamber of Commerce, through the planning commission. It could become part of a still larger view of things.

And, on the subject of large views, the panorama from I-20 was getting noticeably larger, as two new sections opened — between Catalpa and Texas in Monroe, and from Bridge and Cypress Streets in West Monroe.

Twenty Questions

Roamin' in the gloamin' of these little slices of history each week is pleasant enough, but the seasoning is reserved for that segment of our walk through the pages of the World imaginatively headed "unusual or extraordinary." Aspects of the period just passed assumed some of the flavor of a bout in "Twenty Questions."

For example, no one could say if the strange flying object seen in the area was animal, vegetable or mineral. Seen by several persons one week night, it was, however, plainly capable of fascinating maneuvers and had red, green, white and yellow lights.

Equally intriguing were the black and brown stains noted on a number of south Monroe homes and a malodorous aroma (alike to rotten eggs) which accompanied the phenomena. Health officials who tracked the cause of the conditions said they were due to a gaseous element called hydrogen sulfide, reacting in a limited way to the house paint. They didn't attach blame to any point of origin of the gas, but did forecast relief soon from the conditions.

Also last week, it was revealed that a "smooth-talking criminal," who apparently specializes in worthless checks, had paid the Twin Cities a visit. Carrying the papers of a California man robbed and beaten in July, he cashed eight bad checks in local banks and moved on, some $2,700 richer — at least temporarily.

The explosion Monday in the Titan missile silo, which claimed 53 lives near Searcy, Ark., took on vivid local coloration when it was learned one of the dead was the son of a Monroe woman, Mrs. Ora Lee Borden. Killed was Donald Alvin Dean, 30. The obvious terrors of the Searcy disaster were recreated vicariously for local readers during the week by Bill Neel of West Monroe, who lived through a similar holocaust, and Harvey L. Bryant, a West Monroe ironworker conversant by experience with the type of installation that exploded.

On the unusual side too was the announcement by W. E. Whetstone of Monroe, president of the Louisiana Board of Education. He said in a local story that officials are planning a date in September to administer a voluntary literacy test statewide to persons classified illiterate. The official indicated that many technical illiterates (persons lacking at least six years of formal schooling) should be able to pass the test, thereby lowering the state's high level of illiteracy, shown on the last census.

Unusual indeed was the community action program which got residents of the Town & Country subdivision their own swimming pool. And not "community action" in the federal sense, if you please. These people got together, formed a swim club and raised the necessary cash themselves. The pool is beng dedicated at 2 p.m. today, at no cost to taxpayers.

Last and least, though perhaps most unusual of all, is the fact that your favorite columnist (me) is on vacation for the ensuing two weeks. Please give your customary attention during this period to Robert Simonton, well - known worthy substitute and World staff writer. Auf Weidersehn.

Potpourri

The week's potpourri of events and personalities, which space limitations compel us to tick off with plainly discriminatory brevity, looked like this (sing to the tune of "You Are My Sunshine):

In West Monroe, parking was the "cause celebre" at an aldermen's meeting Tuesday. The officials passed a strong ordinance, patterned after Monroe's, in a several-pronged attempt to alleviate related problems. Included is a flat overparking fine that apparently will be rigidly enforced, a stiff penalty for meter abuse, and the use of special purpose meters (12 minutes up to 10 hours) to accommodate specific needs of parkers. According to one of the aldermen, the new ordinance also will facilitate city suits against holders of "big stacks" of unpaid parking tickets.

The World's Week In Focus

Violence Mars Calm Period

By John Cale

VIOLENT TRAGEDIES close at hand and at sea stood in sharp contrast to other newsworthy events as August approached its midway mark on the calendar.

For the most part, the week yielded healthy, legal objections to questionable — if solemnly enacted — measures passed in Congress during the previous week, and grim, but necessary, steps toward open warfare on our part in Southeast Asia.

THEN AS THE WEEK got underway, racial riots exploded in the Watts community of Los Angeles when police moved in to arrest a Negro for driving while intoxicated. Ironically, the complaint had been called in from that same, largely Negro populated area of the city.

Rioting was still in progress as the week drew to a close with several persons dead, and more than 100 reported injuries, lawmen and vicilians. Fifteen major fires set by looting rioters had razed two solid blocks.

Acting Governor Glenn M. Anderson ordered General Roderic Hill of the California National Guard to use all 10,000 men of the 40th Division if necessary to restore order.

Space Underground

FOR ALL OUR efforts to explore space peacefully, the very nature of missiles and rockets of all sorts makes them adaptable to military use. Perhaps this dates from the time some prehistoric man picked up a rock and hurled it at another such man or one of the lower animals of the period.

Today, a man-carrying satellite fired from Cape Kennedy brings out the brightest spotlights of publicity. But a major development of the summer in underground missile sites received intentional downplay, perhaps because of military persuasion.

Part of the summer continental defense program is to get 800 Minuteman I missiles mounted in underground silos, ready to be fired at any time. These will complement the Air Force Titan II missiles — already in the ground at strategic locations around the country.

The Titans are larger than the Minutemen, though both carry nuclear warheads. These have been in their underground positions for two years and are dependent upon a crew comprised of two officers and two airmen.

Last Monday, as a Titan II silo was undergoing slight revisions and updating near Searcy, Arkansas, fire broke out. Some 55 civilian workmen were busy on the project, and the billowing smoke and heat prevented the Air Force from establishing lines of communication for several hours after the fire started.

But early reports from two hospitalized survivors indicated loss would be heavy. The final count of those dead from burns and suffocation reached 53.

Senators John L. McClellan and J. W. Fulbright along with Governor Orval Faubus, Congressman Wilbur Mills and Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert made a personal, on-the-site inspection of the stricken silo.

McClellan

One of the workmen escaping with his life, Hubert A. Saunders of Conway, Arkansas, said the fire started when a diesel engine exploded. But an official Air Force investigation of the fire was underway at press time for this column.

THE INCIDENT resulted in the heaviest casualty toll to date with spaceage materials. It also pointed up the fact that problems of work underground, where fresh air must be supplied mechanically and dangerous fumes pumped out, can combine with the mysteries of outer space in one operation.

In Due Course

NEAR THE END of the week, the Travis County, Texas, grand jury held a four-hour deliberation but indicated more time would be needed before it reached a decision regarding the case of 22-year-old James C. Cross Jr.

Cross last Sunday prepared a statement for police in which he reportedly admitted the slaying of Shirley Ann Stark and Susan Rigsby, University of Texas coeds whose bodies were found in a field in Austin, July 30.

District Attorney Tom Blackwell would not say whether additional evidence would be heard against Cross, who has been charged with the July 18 slaying and placed in the Travis County jail without bond.

The grand jury will meet again on Tuesday of this week but reports its findings only on Thursday.

On High Seas

In a week actually highlighted for formal challenges to the recently passed "voting rights" law and Senate approval of a billion-dollar military pay increase, there was also a dramatic outbreak of violence in the Florida Straits.

The story came to the surface when the Coast Guard located the banana boat, Seven Seas, last Sunday drifting between the Florida Keys and Cuba.

A lone man greeted the Coast Guardsmen. He said he had been hiding in a chain locker in the sloping bows of the Seven Seas. He was identified as Elvin Burywaise, 25, a Honduran sailor.

THE STORY Burywaise told when he was found alone aboard the ship was that the vessel, flying the Panamanian flag, sailed Saturday from Miami, bound without a cargo for Tampa and work in drydock there.

Saturday night, he said, he saw a crewman "shoot the first mate in his bunk."

He said he dashed to the bridge, only to find his captain dead. He said he hid in the chain locker until he heard the Coast Guard hailing the ship.

Ramirez

ELVIN BURYWAISE told reports the gunman was crewman Roberto Ramirez, whom he identified as a Cuban with a wife and daughter still living there.

LATER IN THE week, Ramirez was taken aboard a merchant vessel which located him in the Seven Seas' 14-foot skiff 60 miles south of Miami.

He was transferred to a Coast Guard patrol boat which took him to Miami Beach, then was hustled away by U.S. Immigration Service agents.

ANOTHER COAST GUARD spokesman said Ramirez told the investigators that he shot and killed five of the eight crewmen aboard the 166-foot vessel, then fled the death ship when her engines went dead as she churned toward his Cuban homeland.

New Powers

MORE IN LINE with the routine happenings of the week was Senate passage of the measure to create a new cabinet agency, that of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

By a vote of 57-33 in the Senate — and very little debate — the measure virtually assured the formation of the first cabinet-level function since the Department of Health, Education and Welfare came into being in 1953.

Urban development was a program pushed unsuccessfully by the late President John F. Kennedy and one that President Johnson called a "priority." Johnson hated, "Urban problems are of a scope and magnitude that demand representation at the highest level of government."

Kennedy had said, when he was pressing for the new department, that he would appoint Robert C. Weaver, present head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, to head it.

Johnson has not revealed his intentions, but Weaver is considered a prime possibility to become the first Negro to serve in the Cabinet.

Federal Registrars

AS PRESIDENT JOHNSON signed into law Tuesday a $7.5-billion housing bill with controversial rent subsidy provisions, a move that was allied to the creation of the new Cabinet department, federal voting examiners headed South under provisions of the new Voting Rights law.

Something of the nature of the mission these agents were dispatched to carry out may be determined from an interview that featured Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach.

KATZENBACH WAS ASKED by broadcast newsmen whether the federal government would register all Negroes, including those unable to read or write, under the voting rights law.

"Yes, absolutely," he replied. Southern States, Katzenbach said, have been registering white illiterates and now this same standard must be applied to Negroes.

"Literacy really is not the problem we are concerned with," the nation's chief lawyer said: "The problem we are concerned with is: Don't keep Negroes from voting because they are Negroes. Treat them the same as white, and if you have been registering illiterate whites, then register illiterate Negroes."

KATZENBACH WAS ASKED whether some Democratic governors in the South might be defeated by the Negro vote as a result of the voting rights bill.

"I think a good many politicians in the South will want to rethink some of their past positions when a large number of Negroes are registered," he replied.

ON ANOTHER MATTER, the attorney general was asked whether the Justice Department plans action against anyone refusing to respond to draft orders, as one civil rights organization in Mississippi urged recently.

Katzenbach said the department is looking into the problem.

"It — such a suggestion — has to be pretty organized and pretty much part of a conspiracy, I think, before the law has been violated," he said.

Return Fire

WHILE THE VOTING Rights law was signed in an atmosphere of posed solemnity, there were also those ready to quote "chapter and verse" in the U.S. Constitution that would make the law fall apart for lack of legal precedent.

While we agree that the law appears to go against "tried and true" portions of the Constitution as well as amendments passed within recent years, only court tests decided by today's occupants of court benches will render active conclusions in the world of reality.

Orleans Parish Registrar, A. P. Gallinghouse, on Wednesday filed suit for an immediate court order barring enforcement of the act. His suit was entered one day after federal voting registrars came into nine areas in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama and began enrolling Negroes as voters.

Gallinghouse

Gallinghouse also wants a ruling on the law's constitutionality.

In Baton Rouge, Governor John J. McKeithen told a news conference he supports Gallinghouse in the registrar's attempt to have the voting law ruled invalid.

"The law," McKeithen said, "is a usurpation of states' rights and state responsibility." However, Governor McKeithen urged compliance until the courts reach a decision.

In another part of the nation, Brooklyn, New York, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Morgan filed suit to challenge the law's provision that waives English language literacy requirements.

The language section of the law, which the Morgans contested in a suit filed in Washington, prohibits the states from denying the right to vote for inability to read and write English on condition that the person has a sixth-grade education in an accredited school commonly using a language other than English.

This portion of the law was aimed at giving an estimated 55,000 Puerto Ricans living in New York full voting rights.

'Backdown Forecast'

UNITED NATIONS DIPLOMATS said near the end of the week they fully expected the United States to announce early this week it will abandon attempts to take away Soviet Russia's vote in the General Assmbly because it refuses to pay $62.2 million in peacekeeping assessments.

This was the policy generally believed to be the revised U. S. position U. N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg would present to the assembly's 33-nation committee on peacekeeping operations.

Even before the death of Adlai Stevenson, Goldberg's predecessor in the U. N., officials conceded privately that the idea of a showdown over the charter's Article 19 was dead — primarily because the United States did not have enough support in the assembly to win such a showdown.

We wonder how long either the U. N. General Assembly or Security Council could function if the United States refused to pay its membership dues, peacekeeping obligations — and more. Yet Russia is able, somehow, to maintain a free ride and use the entire U. N. organizational machinery to sound its voice of world rebellion.

IN BIRMINGHAM, Alabama the Nigerian ambassador to the United Nations has called on Southern Christian Leadership Conference workers to keep the Negro struggle for equality coordinated on a worldwide basis.

"Much remains to be done," said Ambassador S. O. Abedo, "but you are now able to look other men straight in the face."

"That is a great victory you have won and we have won in Africa," Adebo told a jubilant group of about 800 delegates Tuesday at the SCLS's annual convention.

Though the executive board meeting Tuesday was private, it was learned that the following topics were discussed at length during the all day session:

—Implementation of the 1965 voting rights bill. SCLC officials recommended that workers intensify their efforts to turn out the Negro vote.

—The Mississippi Freedom Democratic party. SCLC officers agreed to support the party and appointed a committee to draw up such a resolution.

—Policy on Viet Nam. No motion was passed, but King expressed his views on the Viet Nam war and his nonviolent philosophy.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON AND Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey sent letters of greeting. Johnson's letter said: "We are confident that the SCLC, which helped our nation translate its aroused conscience into law, can be counted on to provide the same quality of wisdom, commitment and leadership in over coming the more deep rooted and complex problems which lie ahead."

Duck Disagreement

FEDERAL AND STATE officials appear doomed to lock horns in every field from voting qualifications to congressional apportionment. Last week, they got into a hassle over ducks.

Director John S. Gottschalk of the Federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife warned that the duck breeding population this year was at the lowest levels since reliable surveys were started in 1947. He said the population must be allowed to increase.

WALTER F. CRISSEY, reporting on the 1965 status of waterfowl for the bureau, said statistics showed that the mallard breeding population was the lowest of record "and I think we must conclude that continental hunting regulations last fall were too liberal, at least for the mallard."

LBJ Has His Own Talent Scout

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who ever scouted the President's talent scout—John W. Macy Jr.—found a man with a special skill for finding others.

"Between Macy, President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey, they know everyone of any consequence all over the country," an aide says.

Macy draws on computer punch card records of over 20,000 prospective nominees and sources across the country in industries, labor unions and private organizations to supply Johnson with the right candidate.

He works 14 to 15 hours a day with as much zest as the President in his dual job as chairman of the Civil Service Commission (CSC) and as Johnson's talent scout.

Macy says the talent scouting is just a natural extension of his role as head of the CSC and its 2.5 million government employes. And he spends about a third of his time at it.

Macy finds his job so stimulating "I can't imagine a recreation I'd enjoy more."

A dossier on Macy, like the ones he supplies daily to the President, might go like this:

—A Democrat with over 20 years experience in government personnel, from Post Office to Pentagon.

—Handsome, 48, 6-foot-1, prematuraly gray hair, full of vitality. Described by those who know him as "sharp as a tack" and with a "memory like his computer."

—Well liked, an expert public speaker, married, four children ages 3-13. Episcopalian who attends a weekly religious class, devoted tennis player, expert on baseball.

His wife, the former Joyce Hagen of Rochester, N.Y., a Smith College graduate who met Macy while working as a wartime research analyst for Army intelligence, says: "John can't waste a minute. He's never doing nothing."

Those who deal with Macy might keep in mind her insider's tip: "When he's mad—he just doesn't talk."

Commuting between his fifth floor office suite in the new Civil Service Building to the executive offices near the White House, Macy uses a government car. He'd like to walk the few blocks but it takes too long.

Macy's main goal these days is to get caught up with the seemingly endless number of job vacancies for presidential appointees.

Every week Macy pulls from an electronic computer the score card on appointments and vacancies. By mid-July, Johnson had named 320 men and women to top-salaried jobs in his administration. But, almost every day, a new post becomes vacant.

To help fill these key spots, Macy sends daily memos to the President usually with a half dozen names or more for each.

He says Johnson, keenly aware that his appointees reflect the caliber of his administration, devotes much time to them.

The President reviews Macy's memos in his night reading and acts on them with remarkable speed, "usually coming back the next day with his appraisal," Macy says. Sometimes the President rejects the whole batch, asks for more suggestions and seeks advice from his cabinet and close friends. He frequently calls for personal interviews and full FBI reports.

Looking for a new director of the Central Intelligence Agency, where the boss needs plenty of managerial skill, Johnson read a book which detailed the role of Vice Adm. William F. Raborn in developing the Navy's Polaris missile system.

It came as a surprise, like so many of his recent appointments, when Johnson called Raborn out of retirement to head the CIA.

Macy says "politics as usual" is not a consideration in finding the best men. The search is taken without preconditions, Macy says, adding that the approach in each case must be as different as the jobs.

Macy and his helpers prepare a profile of each job and the requirements for it before they begin the search for who can best fill those requirements.

Macy has worked in civil service executive posts under three presidents—Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Johnson.

He says Johnson, with 34 years' experience, "characterizes himself as a career man in government" and more than his two predecessors tries to elevate men and women from the ranks of federal service.

Macy says he is often told that some prospect "would be great, but you'll never get him."

"I don't let that deter me," he adds.

He finds most turndowns came for financial reasons, because key men in private enterprise often can't afford to take the pay cut a government post might entail. Macy has been using appointments to advisory groups and committees to get the services of experts, hoping they'll catch Potomac fever and accept a full-time Washington job later.

Macy himself is a shining example of a government career success story. He says his job now "is the fulfillment of my aspirations of 20 years ago," and he gets great fun out of the close, informal association with the President and "being directly involved with the formulation of personnel policies for the government."

One Sunday, taking his wife and children to church, Macy heard someone calling him as he drove on a downtown street. It turned out to be the President in his limousine, impulsively asking his talent scout to come around to the White House for lunch.

"The children were amazed," Macy recalls.

In 1958, Macy, then executive director of the Civil Service Commission, decided to take a breather from 20 years of government life, which had included personnel work in the Social Security Bureau, at Los Alamos with the Atomic Energy Commission and in the War Department. He says he found the Eisenhower administration not quite so receptive to his ideas for higher civil service salaries, greater flexibility in the examining process and recognition of employe unions.

He went back as executive vice president to his alma mater, Wesleyan University class of 1938, in Middletown, Conn., where he had majored in government and won a Phi Beta Kappa key.

He really didn't like the slow pace of college life and eagerly accepted when newly elected President Kennedy called Macy back in 1961 to head the CSC.

Johnson stopped Macy at a cocktail party to tell him to come in and talk about the role of talent scout. He gave Macy that job right after the 1964 election.

Macy admires Johnson from working with him on the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity, set up by Kennedy in 1961 to halt racial discrimination in federal hiring. It made progress, Macy says, "largely because of Johnson's strong commitment to it."

Macy also shares Johnson's desire to boost women in government.

"Every day he says 'let's find some feminine candidates'," Macy says.

But Macy has his troubles coming up with them. His 20,000 punch card dossiers include about 5,000 women. But when the cards are run through the computer to match qualifications and experience with the job, Macy reports, the women fall far short most often on public service experience.

Macy is intrigued by the variety, the personal touch and the drama Johnson employs to spotlight new appointees.

What Are Your Chances Of Surving Cancer?

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP) — If cancer should strike, just what are your chances of being cured?

Vastly better than 25 years ago, but not much better than five to ten years ago, for most types of cancer, a frank look at cancer cure rates shows.

And most authorities expect little improvement until more effective drugs are found, or until greater progress is made in detecting cancers early, or preventing them in the first place.

In cancer, "cure" means a person is living with no signs of the disease five years or longer after it had first been treated.

In 1940, one in five patients was cured.

Now, one in three is cured, the American Cancer Society estimates.

But that rate has been holding fairly steady.

Earlier detection usually boosts chances of cure, for then a cancer is more likely to be localized, more likely to be totally removed, or destroyed by surgery, radiation, or drugs.

Your chances depend also partly upon the type of cancer, where it is located, whether it is slow or fast-growing.

Hard and fast figures on average chances for cures are hard to come by. The main reason is that in more than half of the states, doctors and hospitals don't report the fact that a patient has cancer and is being treated for it or report the results.

The main figures by which to measure cure rates come from a few states which for years have had cancer registries. All new cases of cancer are reported, as well as treatments, and what happens to these patients one to many years later.

One such yardstick comes from combined figures from three state registries, plus a number of hospitals across the United States.

In order to indicate the most recent trends — rather than waiting five years of time — this analysis uses three-year survival rates from the time treatment started.

For cancer of almost every site, says this analysis by the National Cancer Institute, the three-year survival rate was higher for people getting cancer in 1955-59 than during 1940-49.

The greatest improvement occurred in the years up to 1955, but since then, except for cancer of a few sites, there seems to have been relatively little progress.

Here are some examples in percentage:

Cancer type	1940-44	1950-54	1955-59
Stomach	9	15	15
Colon (men)	24	44	49
Colon (women)	31	48	53
Bladder	46	57	58
Lung (men	3	7	9
Lung (women)	7	13	12
Skin (men— except melanoma or black cancer)	90	91	91
Breast (women)	63	68	68
Pancreas	3	3	3
Cervix (invasive)	49	64	63

Of all major cancers, other figures show, the greatest gain has come in preventing deaths from cancer of the cervix and of the uterus — with death rates down by about half since 25 years ago.

This is credited mainly to early detection, through "pap" smears and examinations, and improved treatments. But here also the rate of life-saving has not been increasing lately. It is estimated that only half of the women in the United States have ever had the smear test that determines, simply and painlessly, whether any cancer cells are being sloughed off from the uterus.

For reasons totally unknown, cancer of the stomach is not so common now as 20 years ago. The cure rate, when this cancer does occur, is up slightly in the last 20 years.

Acute leukemia still is fatal, but now 80 per cent of the victims win remissions or temporary reprieves with drugs. These last for months and in some cases for two or three years. A very few youngsters have gone far longer.

For cancer of the breast, little progress has been made in 10 years in boosting chances of cure.

Skin cancer is most highly curable — your chances being four out of five for cure — and one reason is you can begin to suspect pretty early that something is wrong and have it treated.

What all the figures, from various yardsticks, say is this:

Excluding skin cancer, your over-all chances of whipping cancer are about one in three. This is a general average.

Some cancers with good prospects of cure, such as cancer of the cervix, rectum and colon, are fairly common. And some cancers with poor prospect of cure, such as cancer of the stomach or pancreas, are not very frequent.

Lung cancer is alarmingly on the rise, and the chances of cure are pretty grim so far.

Grim, also, are figures showing that more Americans, in total numbers, are dying from cancers than 25 or even 10 years ago.

A principal reason is that there are millions more of us now than a generation or so ago. And more Americans are living to middle age or beyond, the years in which people become more susceptible to cancers in various sites.

In 1964, the cancer death toll was 290,000. More men are dying each year now from cancer than women.

This year, it is estimated 550,000 Americans will be diagnosed as having cancer. Thousands will join the ranks of the 1,300,000 who have won their battles in the past and are still alive.

The American Cancer Society says half of these victims could be saved or cured, if their cancers were detected early enough and if they received the best available treatments.

These are large "ifs."

There are no easy tests yet to spot most small, early cancers hidden inside the body, in the stomach, lungs, pancreas, liver or other sites.

There have been many false alarms of a blood test that would determine if a person had a cancer somewhere in his body. With such a test, doctors then could concentrate upon hunting down the site and begin treatment.

With yearly checkups, the chances are slim that a small cancer could be missed and grow to fatal proportions before the person had another checkup detecting the cancer.

Early detection does very often save lives. And detection methods are better now than 10 years ago.

Cancer detection clinics, examining thousands of presumably healthy persons, do find cancers and do initiate earlier treatment that increases cure rates, the clinics report.

More people are getting cancer check-ups. One survey indicates only 14 per cent of Americans had exams for cancer in 1948 compared with 44 per cent in 1962.

Cure rates for cancer of the cervix should be 100 per cent, says Dr. Emerson Day, reporting results of detection examinations at the Strang Clinic in New York City. Skin cancers should never cause deaths. And, he adds, cancers of the colon and rectum should be 75 per cent curable, and half of cancers of the prostate gland could be detected in time to be curable.

But such clinics examine 1,000 persons for every 10 found to have cancers. One suggestion is that detection efforts be concentrated mainly among middle-aged and older persons who are more susceptible.

A thorough check-up to seek unsuspected cancers is not possible for everyone — the nation's doctors could spend all their time just on that effort.

Furthermore, many people, especially in lower social-economic groups, do not have regular general health checkups, and their cancers, when detected, tend to be well advanced. It is also unfortunately true that the very best kind of treatment is not available to everyone.

More research to learn why cancers begin, how to prevent them, how to detect them more accurately, how to treat them most effectively, holds the ultimate answers.

Meanwhile, the best practical defenses suggested by cancer authorities to boost your chances are:

More concentration upon finding cancers that can be seen or felt, particularly through examinations of the rectum, cervix, lymph nodes and breast, or on the skin.

More preventive action based upon present knowledge about known or suspected causes.

Cigarette smoking, for instance, is blamed as a cause of lung cancer, and smoking can be diminished or stopped. Too much exposure to the sun is blamed for many skin cancers. Some chemicals that people work with are known to cause cancers in animals, and unnecessary exposure can be avoided.

Any one person's chances of escaping or overcoming cancer involves an element of luck. In time, knowledge will replace the luck.

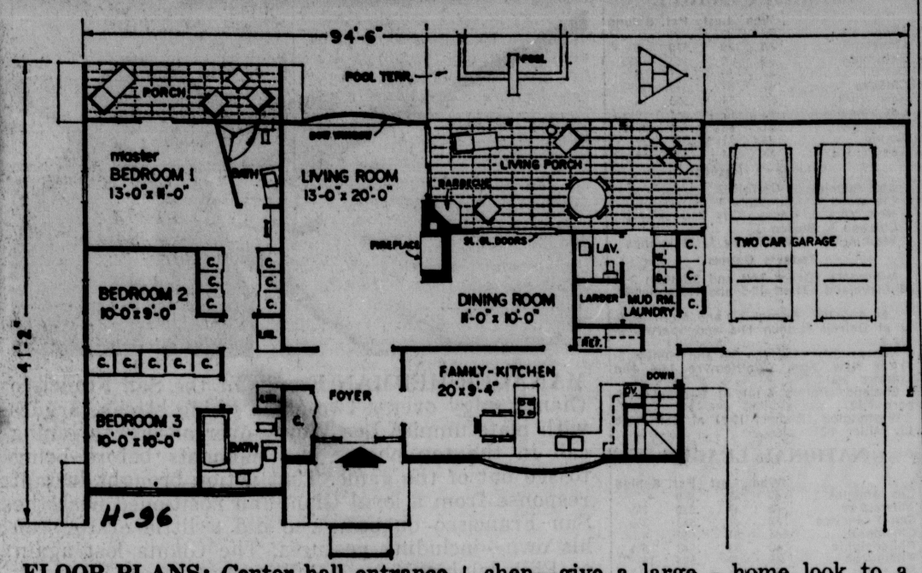
THE ENVELOPE roof on the bedroom wing at the left side of this three-bedroom, one-story house gives it a pleasing, guaint appearance; inside, modern floor planning provides an excellent traffic arangement.



FLOOR PLANS: Center hall entrance—and wide expanses across the foyer and living room; dining room and living room; and family room and kitchen—give a large - home look to a house with a modest 1460 square feet of living space.

Modern One-Story Home Has Picturesque Roof Top

By ANDY LANG

An envelope roof gets its name because it encloses an entire structure. It sometimes is seen on summer cottages. Because the roof extends all the way down the sides, a large part of the dwelling is virtually maintenance-free.

Architect Rudolph A. Matern has used an envelope roof in the latest House of the Week, but only over the forward projection of the bedroom wing and rear porch. The result is a delightfully picturesque look to a one-story house with a modest 1460 square feet of living space.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-96

Special Charm

A glance at the artist's rendering of Design H-96 makes it apparent how the envelop effect on the left side of the house gives it a special charm of its own. Passersby could hardly have anything but compliments for the exterior appearance of this residence. The over-all aura is enhanced by the use of wood cedar shingles for all the roofing surfaces, including the enveloped section. The specified shingles are especially treated against fire. However, asphalt shingles may be used if desired or if local ordnances do not permit the use of wood for roofing.

A first-impression of bigness is created on the interior by the in-line design of the foyer and living room. The open length totals over 27 fe et, with the view topped off by a 10' wide bow window. The fireplace in the living room utilizes the same chimney as the barbecue on the rear porch, which can be reached from the outside, the living room, the dining room, the service area and the two-car garage. Privacy of the porch is assured by its recessed location, set between the living room and the garage.

Spaciousness is also evident in the family room-kitchen combination, with 20' of unpartioned space. Every modern appliance is included to make the housewife's chores easier. And the old-fashioned larder in the adjoining area will delight the lady of the house as much as anything else. There was a period when food storage sections went out of style. They made a comeback when women housing conferences in various parts of the country showed a demand for convenient places for storing provisions. The mud room, with a laundry, lavatory and rear entrance, makes housekeeping easier.

Bedroom Wing

The bedroom wing, appealing on the outside, is practical on the inside. It seems to be isolated from the rest of the house. Privacy is assured and sound control is excellent. The three bedrooms have a sound buffer of baths, closets and hall space. In a one-story home, this is a design problem not always solved.

The master bedroom has an interesting angled wall which forms one of the two and one-half baths in the home. Rear access to a second porch provides a fine tete-a-tete area for mom and dad.

For those who wish a pool, architect Matern suggests that it be located in back of the main rear porch. This would permit those using the pool to utilize the entrance to the mud room for cleaning up before going into any of the other rooms.

Governor Calls City's Upheaval An Insurrection

NEW YORK (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown on Saturday described the bloody racial riots in Los Angeles as a "state of insurrection."

The governor, tired and haggard from an emergency flight from Europe to Kennedy Airport on his way to the West Coast, vowed to halt the rioting that already has taken 18 lives.

"I'm going back there and I'm going to restore law and order, period," the governor said before boarding an Air Force jet provided by President Johnson to expedite his return to California.

"We are involved in a state of insurrection there," he said.

The governor arrived by commercial jet liner from Europe after cutting short a vacation in Greece on learning of the racial disorders in Los Angeles.

On his arrival at the airport, Brown went into a hurried conference with two aides of President Johnson sent to discuss the possible use of federal assistance in quelling the disorders in Los Angeles.

He was closeted for 35 minutes with the presidential aides.

In declining to say what had been discussed in the meeting, Brown said :"It would be improper for me to comment at this time, until I know more about the situation."

He boarded the Air Force plane and took off immediately after the meeting for California.

The governor, on his arrival in New York, appealed to residents of the riot area to "cooperate with the police authorities and obey every law of the land."

He told newsmen that he had called out National Guard troops from his vacation headquarters in Athens, Greece.

Asked about criticism that the call came too late, Brown said: "As soon as I heard, I called up the National Guard. I would just tell everybody that, as governor of California, my hope is that in every possible way the people will cooperate with the police and obey every law of the land."

"This is absolutely necessary for their own protection," he added.

AGREEMENT EXTENDED

JAKARTA (UPI) — A trade agreement between Indonesia and Australia has been extended another year despite political disagreements between the two countries, it was announced Saturday.

Garden Pool In Landscape

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Are you planning a garden pool, fountain or waterfall in your landscape this summer or fall? It is an excellent idea. There is no yard too small for this inviting project. These pools can be quite tiny or may cover a vast area.

Of course, a small yard should have the small water pool that is simple, yet decorative. A showy bowl, or a mosaic designed concrete container is ideal for the small spot to be decorated. This, believe it or not, may be moved about, to another location if so desired.

It would be very attractive to have a blue tinted concrete pool "bowl" with narcissus planted around it, reflecting their colorful beauty in the shallow water. To one side of the small patio this would add an enjoyable view. If one so desired, driftwood could be placed inside the small pool with several large glass water balls adrift like large bubbles.

Sufficient Color

The reflection of the sky or nearby greenery would add sufficient color to make this a pleasing spot. This bowl would be too small for plants or fish. However, if one desired goldfish, an old laundry tub could be sunk nearby to its rim as a container for water. Waterlilies could be grown inside this type pool, also.

Both fish and lilies should be thinned out regularly, however, to avoid crowding. Information on how to make these small pools may be obtained from the Garden Center Library. There are many ways that you can make these, even using your own creative idea, but, it is well to first seek the help from more experienced artists. At least compare your idea with theirs.

Either standard concrete which contains granite gravels, or the newer form which contains lightweight gravels such as vermiculite, haydite and others make concrete a good product for craft projects. The advantage of the lighter materials is, of course, the portability of the tiny pool where the family may like to rearrange its patio decorations from time to time. The surface of the lightweight concrete resembles stone more than the standard concrete.

Form For Pool

Almost anything salvaged from attics, darkrooms, or workshops, that will hold water will serve as a form for the small pool, and with well planned surroundings of plants, or stones and gravel, this will be most attractive. Some of the things that have been used are wine barrels, laundry tubs, horse watering troughs, hot water (and other) tanks, wheelbarrow beds, oil drums, and furnace ducts. There is no end to the many things that may be used. These pools, as I said, are best used in a small groomed garden, near the garden path or patio where they may reflect a special plant, drawing attention to the passers-by who will want a close view of what they see. Since water temperature is apt to change too fast for the health of fish or plants the reflecting pool is left clear.

However, if this type pool is deep enough the water temperatures may be stabilized enough to accommodate plants. Any time there is a pool in the garden a bit of freshness and coolness is added. Like magic, water is refreshing just to see it or hear it nearby. When it is beautified with plants it can be even more magic with the spell it may cast on its viewers.

Waterlilies

From our Louisiana Garden Club Federation Newsletter we have just obtained a wonderful horticulture note on waterlilies by Mrs. Mae Webb Stephens. She gives valuable information on growing these in the small pool. Mrs. Stephens tells us that the hardy type water lily comes in all colors except blue. They will survive outdoors if the roots are not frozen. Seventy degrees is the lowest for the tropical lilies. If using this variety we should remove them after blooming and store them for winter.

The water lilies are planted in soft mud in a natural pool or in a wooden box or metal tub in an artificial pool. Rich soil is required in both cases. Either use garden loam or clay soil mixed with well-rotted fertilizer. Clay soil is best of all. If commercial fertilizers are used be sure they are recommended for waterlilies.

Planting Temperature

Plant the lily tubers when the temperature reaches 75 degrees. After the lily has sprouted it should be placed in the pool. The hardy types may be planted not deeper than 24 inches, while the tropical lily should not be planted over 12 inches deep. If the pool is deeper than this raise the pot (container) with the rhizomes from the bottom to the desired depth. An inch or two of sand over the soil will help to keep the water from discoloring. A brick or stone placed on the pot will help weight it down. About a bushel basket of soil should be allowed for each lily container. Mrs. Stephens gives a list of hardy varieties suitable for the small pool. They are, "Yellow Pygmy," "Aurora," "Marliac White," all small varieties; and, medium types are, "Blue Beauty," "General Pershing," "Mrs. Edwards Whitaker," and "Alice Tricker." Day blooming lilies recommended are "Director Moore," a deep purple, and "Trail Blazer," and "Aviator Pring," nice yellows. A bright red is the "Evelyn Randiz." Mrs. Stephens stresses to each of us that to achieve special enchantment in our garden, add a tub of lilies to our pool and enjoy their beauty through the fall.

The booklets, "Garden Pools, Fountains and Waterfalls," "Rock Gardens," and "Lighting Your Home," practical ideas for interiors and patios — may be seen at the Garden Center Library. So, plan to add a new idea in your garden this summer while at home on your vacation, or during your spare time. It will certainly give enjoyment, both in planning and in the finished project.

Prune Roses For Blooms

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

In Louisiana, roses make vigorous growth during the spring and summer. For a good fall bloom an August pruning is recommended. Cut canes, of the more vigorous varieties, to about 24 to 30 inches from the ground. Prune out all weak, dead or dying portions of the plants.

An application of a fertilizer high in nitrogen at the rate of one to two ounces per plant in August is also helpful. Continue the spray program for rose pests. Aphids (plant lice), leaf spot and mildew use mildex. Always keep the ground clean of fallen leaves.

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are planning a trip in these next few weeks before school opens, look along the highways for interesting seed pods that are formed or being formed by many plants. They can be used in many unusual ways for decorations in the home during the coming holiday seasons.

Many flowers dry in a near natural manner. A material silica-gel is most effective for drying flowers. It is an odorless, inert deseccant used for many years in potato chips and cracker boxes to keep contents crisp. You will be amazed at your results.

Summer Salads

Most fresh vegetables used in summer salads may be torn, shredded or cut an hour or so ahead of time and stored covered in the refrigerator with little or no loss of flavor, crispness or food value.

Most salads look and taste better if the ingredients are bite size, but not minced or finely chopped. Foods cut too fine may form a paste when mixed with salad dressing. Vegetables for a molded salad often are cut finer than those for other salads. Finely shredded cabbage is better seasoned, more attractive and easier to chew than coarse shreds.

Sliced tomatoes do lose their juice easily so they should be added to the salad just before serving. To prevent avocados from darkening sprinkle the cut surfaces with lemon juice or French dressing before adding to salad.

Small Car

If you, Mr. or Mrs., are planning to buy a small car, our specialist in Agriculture Engineering, Joseph L. Smilie, gave us a few remarks which were summarized from an article in Traffic Safety magazine. Small cars as a group are not involved in accidents any more frequently than standard size cars. In the accidents that do happen the rates of serious injury and death are sharply higher among small cars occupants than they are among occupants of larger cars. In Illinois, a study revealed that the rate of driver deaths in small cars was more than twice as high as the corresponding rate in other size passenger cars, and the rate of other passenger deaths was 50 per cent higher.

On The House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are some things you just can't check.

One of them is the amount of money wasted each year by home owners who don't take care of paint brushes. Good-quality, modern brushes are designed to last for years. But it is the rare individual indeed who gets years of wear out of them. Most of us are inclined to use them a few times, then permit them to harden or get out of shape, or both. When it comes time to paint again, we look at the battered brush, think how much trouble it will be to restore it to usefulness, then go out and buy a new one.

All this is fine for the paint brush manufacturers, although it must be admitted most of them are constantly urging us to take care of their products. But it's not good for our pocketbooks. An allied disadvantage of lack of care is that we sometimes use an abused brush and wonder why we don't get good results.

Brush Rare

When a professional painter buys a new brush, he takes it to his place of business, twirls the handle briskly between his hands for several minutes, then rubs one hand back and forth across the bristles a while longer. He then wraps the brush in heavy paper that doesn't have print on it and suspends it for 24 hours in raw linseed oil. Note that he suspends it, being careful not to bend the bristles. After the one-day bath, the brush is removed from the oil, which is squeezed out by rubbing the flat side of the bristles against the edge of a board or across a smooth wire. A rinsing in turpentine, a thorough drying — and the brush is ready to put a new finish on the interior or exterior of your home. If you intend to do the painting yourself, why not follow the professional's example? (You can get Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 954, Jamaica, N.Y. 11431.)

When finished with a job, clean the brush with the same solvent for the particular finishing material for which it was used. That is, if you used paint, varnish or enamel, the solvent is turpentine or mineral spirits. For waterbase or any of the latex paints, the solvent is water. For lacquer, it's lacquer thinner. And for shellac, it's denatured alcohol. Always read the label on the container of an odorless paint to determine the type of cleaning agent for the brush or, for that matter, for a roller.

Special Use

If the brush is not to be used for a while, wrap it in aluminum foil, wax paper or any similar type of material and store it so that the bristles will not be bent. Put an identifying mark on the brush handle so you'll know what it was used for the last time. Don't use a paint brush for lacquer; or a shellac brush for paint; or make any similar usage conversion. Take care of each brush and you'll make three or four last a long time.

Southern Gardener

Thoughts Of Autumn

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Early August brings to the Southern gardener thoughts of the long and wonderful autumn and winter ahead. Advertisements for fall and spring bulbs have already begun to show up in the magazines because Holland bulbs are beginning to arrive in this country and American-grown bulbs were long since dug and dried for shipment.

To get the best results from crocuses, they really ought to be planted six inches deep in September. Daffodils of all sorts benefit by early October planting. The poeticus group never really have any dormant period and should be planted as soon as received. Tulips can be put into the ground to good advantage just as soon as you receive them in September. All of these bulbs, if foreign grown, have been dehydrated for safe keeping and for shipment. It takes them a week or so to absorb back their normal moisture before they can even begin the process of root growth.

Booklet on Lilies

An excellent booklet on growing lilies is available from the North American Lily Society, 21 Oakland Street, Lexington, Massachusetts for a dollar. The book is a paper-back, full of excellent black-and-white drawings of all the kinds of lilies and of how to plant them and care for them. Membership in the Society is five dollars a year.

This is the time to plant bulbs of the Madonna lily. This gorgeous flower has rosettes of evergreen foliage which are beautiful in the garden all winter if the plants never bloomed at all.

August is the month to plant the dormant roots of oriental poppies, too. We mention this here because we really believe that the failure to think about oriental poppies in August and set them out keeps most gardeners from having them in their gardens.

Obtain Bulbs

Early August is the time to order and plant the bulbs of fall crocus, the purple colchicums, yellow sternbergias and the hardy cylamens some of which have been in bloom since before the Fourth of July.

To enjoy the colchicums and the earliest of all Crocus zonatus in the house, plant a few of each in shallow bulb pans or in almost any kind of pot. Soak the pots by setting them in water a few hours, and then watch the magic corms positively erupt with little flowers. This magic is one of the nicest things about early fall and one which shut-ins and hospital patients always seem to enjoy immensely.

INDIANS RUN OWN RELIEF BUREAU

HAY LAKE, Alta. (AP) —The Indians of Hay Lake have set up their own welfare committee which is gaining the reputation of being tougher than the federal officials who handle Indian relief money.

The three - man committee screens welfare applicants and decides how much relief each family should get. It works in cooperation with federal Indian affairs branch officials.

"There's no doubt the committee is tougher than I thought it would be," says Joe Leask, superintendent of the federal Fort Vermilion-Slavey Indian agency, 400 miles northwest of Edmonton.

After the committee's first distribution of relief money, he says, "several people complained to me that they didn't receive relief. The committee thoroughly investigated each case. . ."

Colts, Unitas Slap Cards, 22-10

75,229 Fans Witness Baltimore Defense

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Johnny Unitas and a stingy Colt defense gave Baltimore a 22-10 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a National Football League exhibition game before 75,229 fans Saturday night.

The great Unitas, starting his 10th pro campaign, uncorked two short touchdown passes but it was the Colt defense — triggered by Dennis Gaubatz, Fred Miller and Steve Stonebreaker — that kept the Cards reeling.

St. Louis, limited to two first downs before intermission, didn't muster a sustained drive until the final period. The Cards got to the one, but were thrown back and lost the ball on downs.

Less than a minute later, St. Louis scored when defensive back Abe Woodson grabbed a deflected pass from relief quarterback Gary Cuzzo and scampered 15 yards into the end zone.

The crowd, largest ever to see pro football in a nonleague city "gives further proof" said promoter Dave Dixon, "that New Orleans wants an NFL team."

The city is in the running for the league's 16th franchise, which will be awarded next spring for the 1967 season.

Defense set up the first Colt tally. In the first quarter Lenny Lyles intercepted a Charley Johnson pass that led quickly to a seven-yard Unitas to John Mackey pass six plays later for the tally.

Unitas showed his stuff as a runner in the second period by breaking away for 37 yards to the St. Louis seven. He then passed to Willie Richardson for the score.

The Colts got their final tally when Tom Matte went over from the one after Bob Boyd had stolen another Johnson pass and carried it 34 yards to the Card three.

Lou Michaels kicked a 26-yarder for Baltimore and Jim Bakken booted a 20-yarder for the Cards.

Homer In 11th Takes Solons By Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pinch hitter Joe Cunningham slammed a two-out, three-run homer in the 11th inning, giving Washington an 8-5 victory over Baltimore Saturday night.

All of the runs were unearned as a result of Jerry Adair's error.

With one out Adair bobbled Ken Hamlin's grounder. Willie Kirkland popped up, but Dick Nen singled and Cunningham followed with his blast off Don Larsen.

The Senators presented the Orioles with three unearned runs in the seventh inning of the sloppily played contest but then rallied for a run and a 5-5 tie in the eighth. They scored on a walk to Don Zimmer and singles by Ken McMullen and Don Lock.

McMullen paved the way for the Ealtimore rally in the seventh, committing a two-out, two-base throwing error on Adair's grounder. Curt Blefary scored on the wild toss, and Adair came home on Jack Brandt's home run.

The Orioles' first two runs also were unearned following errors by Frank Kreuter and Hamlin.

Jim King tripled across two unearned runs and scored another on Woodie Hel's double in the Washington first.

17th Cotton States Play Around Corner For Club

September is just around the corner for most people and for Winnie Cole, Bayou DeSiard Country Club golf professional, and other club officials, it's time to be thinking about the fine field expected to be fielded for the 17th annual Cotton States Invitational Golf Tournament.

A strong field with many contenders is the rule rather than the exception for the Cotton States and indications are that competition will be even more heavy for the title now that three-time winner Homero Blancas has hit the pro circuit.

The tourney is slated Sept. 3-6 with the course open for practice beginning Tuesday, Aug. 31.

Some of the south's strongest college teams will be represented in the tourney, including the University of Houston, kingpin of golfdom in higher education.

Others expected will hail from Memphis State, University of Texas, University of Georgia, Louisiana State University, University of Southwestern Louisiana, Louisiana Tech, Northeast, East Texas State, McNeese State and the University of Mississippi.

The tourney will also draw from a deep-well of local talent with several to be considered contenders for the title.

John F. Savage, tournament chairman for the event, said the field will be limited to the first 160 invited acceptances with the 32 low qualifiers placed in the championship flight. The losers in the first round will make up the first flight and all other flights will be limited to 16 players.

Prizes are in store for the winner, runner-up, and consolation winner of each flight.

The tourney schedule calls for 18 holes of qualifying Friday, the starting day; Saturday opens with a round of match play followed by a cocktail hour and dance; Sunday includes two match rounds for the championship and first flights and one round for all others followed by an outdoor party; all semifinals and finals will be played Monday.

Included with Savage on the tournament committee are Tom Hyland, Bob Powell, and Dr. Walter Ernst.

The rules committee, headed by Ted Cash, includes: Cole, Don Richards, of Shreveport who will again serve as starter for the tourney, and Dwight Hanson.

Blancas, who has won every edition of the Cotton States since 1962 defeated Fred Marti, also of Houston in his first title effort, and edged Roy Pace, former Louisiana Tech star in 1963. All three have turned professional.

Pavletich Helps

Cincinnati Takes Cardinals, 4 To 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Don Pavletich doubled home a run in the fourth inning, then scored the tie-breaking run on a wild pitch in Cincinnati's 4-2 victory over St. Louis Saturday.

The Cardinals were unable to get a hit off Joe Nuxhall or Billy McCool after the third inning. Nuxhall, bringing his record to 9-3, allowed three hits before McCool pitched no-hit ball over the final three innings.

Deron Johnson started things for the Reds in the fourth inning when he drew a two-out walk off Ray Sadecki. Pavletich doubled and raced to third on the throw home. Sadecki followed with a wild pitch, enabling Pavletich to score.

Sadecki, losing his seventh straight game for a 2-11 record, also helped the Reds with a wild pitching in the third inning. Nuxhall singled with two out, took second on the wild pitch and scored on Tommy Harper's single.

The Cardinals had built a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Ted Savage hit his first homer for St. Louis after Phil Gagliano singled.

The Reds scored their final run in the eighth on singles by Pete Rose and Vada Pinson, a walk and Gordie Coleman's grounder.

Nuxhall, now 9-3, was forced to leave after six innings in the 95-degree heat because of an upset stomach.

New York Mets Defeat Houston After 10 Innings

HOUSTON (AP) — Chuck Hiller raced home as pitcher Danny Coombs threw away Ron Hunt's squeeze bunt, lifting the New York Mets to a 10-inning 1-0 victory over Houston Saturday night.

The triumph snapped the Mets losing streak at 11, longest in the majors, and was their first after seven defeats at Houston this season.

Hiller singled with one out, stole second and moved to third as Roy McMillan singled. Coombs replaced Dave Giusti and got two strikes on pinch hitter Hunt. But Hunt then bunted, and Coombs grabbed the ball and threw it wildly.

Houston starter Larry Dierker allowed only McMillan's first-inning infield single before Charley Smith beat out an infield single in the seventh.

Galen Cisco allowed Houston only three hits through six innings, then left for reliever Darrell Sutherland at the start of the seventh.

Two of the hits came in the second when Rusty Staub and Ron Brand singled with two out. But Eddie Kasko flied out. Bob Aspromonte tripled with two out in the fourth, but this time Brand flied out.

Young Swimmer Puzzles Experts With Title Deeds

LONDON (AP) — Twelve-year-old Karen Muir of South Africa, the Shirley Temple of world swimming, has amazed, puzzled and confounded the experts.

Karen, 5-feet-4 and 111 pounds, became the youngest world record holder in any major sport by setting a world mark of 1:08.7 for the girls' 110-yard backstroke in the British Swimming Championships last week.

Then she went on to win the girls' 220-yard freestyle title and the girls' 110-yard freestyle championship.

It was the first time anyone so young had captured three titles in the 25-year-old history of the championship.

Karen's name now is known all over the world — just as Shirley Temple's was years ago.

Karen of the intent blue eyes and freckled cheeks cannot explain her success — just as Shirley Temple could never explain it in her young days.

That's something for the doctors and scientists to talk about. And they're coming up with all kinds of explanations.

Karen — the girl with tears streaming down her face when told she was a world record holder — also started plenty of discussion in the swimming world.

Bert Kinnear, a leading British coach, remarked: "This girl is mature for her age. She can glide through the water. She hasn't any bulk — like the beef some older girls carry — to slow her down.

Koufax Wins 21st, Scores To Beat Bucs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sandy Koufax pitched a five-hitter for his 21st victory and scored the lone run when Roberto Clemente dropped Jim Gilliam's two-out line drive in the 10th inning as Los Angeles edged Pittsburgh and Don Cardwell 1-0 Saturday night.

Koufax, who has lost only four games, struck out 12, increasing his major league-leading total to 279, only 69 away from Bob Feller's all-time season record.

Cardwell, who held the National League-leading Dodgers to five hits, walked Koufax and Wes Parker with two out in the 10th. Gilliam then lined to right fielder Clemente, who dropped the ball as Koufax raced home from second.

Lou Johnson saved Koufax from defeat when he raced to the low barrier in front of the left field stands in the eighth inning and made a leaping catch of Bob Bailey's towering 365-foot drive.

Koufax retired 17 straight batters before Manny Mota opened the ninth with a single. Mota went to second on a wild pitch but was out trying to go to third on Roberto Clemente's grounder to Koufax.

Cardwell held the Dodgers hitless until John Roseboro singled with two out in the fifth. John Kennedy and Parker singled in the eighth, but Gilliam lined into an inning-ending double play.

The Monroe Seniors, runners-up in the recent Dixie World Series held in Meridian, Mississippi, struck early as they scored their lone run in the first inning, but were held close the rest of the game by Bobby Gate's four - hit, 12 strike - out mound effort.

KTVE scored when Johnny Pace and Bobby Lockwood reached base on successive walks and then advanced on Roy Holloway's balk. Singles by Coot Dumas and Leon Miletello scored both Pace and Lockwood.

Green Bay Drills Giants With Starr

GREEN BAY, Wis (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, led by Bart Starr's passing and a bruising defense, hammered the New York Giants 44-7 Saturday night in the National Football League exhibition opener for both teams before a crowd of 50,837.

Starr completed 10 of 12 passes for 153 yards and two touchdowns, including a 51-yard strike to Carroll Dale and an eight-yard bullet to Bob Lonb to account for the first two Packer scores.

Tom Brown, a second-year man from Maryland, got off the longest run of the night, an electrifying 92-yard punt return for the Packers' sixth touchdown.

The Giants' offense, meanwhile, was being smothered by a hard-rushing Packer line and a tight secondary.

Gary Wood, the Giant quarterback, completed only three of 11 pass attempts for 38 yards in the first half which ended with New York trailing 20-0.

Rookie John Torok of Arizona State took over for Wood early in the third period. He was at the helm when rookie Tucker Frederickson of Auburn scored from three yards out for the Giants' only touchdown with 1:57 left to play.

Newellton's Preis Inks With Bulldogs

LAFAYETTE, (Special) — Edwin Preis of Newellton, a much sought - after football star, has signed a Gulf States Conference grant-in-aid to attend the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Acclaimed as "Mr. Everything" at Newellton High School, the prize 6-foot-1, 198-pound fullback was inked by Irwin Sibille, Southwestern's line coach.

His academic and athletic feats at Newellton these past four years undoubtedly rank among the most impressive that any prep athlete in Louisiana has ever achieved.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Preis, Sr., the 18-year-old ace was valedictorian of Newellton's 1965 senior class with a 3.95 average. He was senior class vice-president, as well as president of the NHS student council.

Preis earned a total of 12 letters, including four each in football, track, and basketball. As a standout back under coach Jerry Head, he rushed for 2,908 yards in four grid seasons.

Following the '64 campaign he received recognition as a prep All-American, plus a first team berth on the Class B All-State honor roll for the second straight year.

Although he missed three games last season because of an injury, Preis was voted as the outstanding back in District 3-B after gaining 730 yards in 111 trips and scoring 75 points. As a junior he rushed for 1,272 yards and contributed 123 points. points.

Preis also drew praise for his defensive ability. In Louisiana's High School All-Star game at Baton Rouge recently, he saw considerable action as a linebacker.

The versatile athlete was named to the all-district basketball team, and he ran a leg on Newellton's winning 440 - yard relay team in the district track meet.

Among his many other honors: outstanding city attorney at Pelican Boy's State; 4-H Club president; editor of school newspaper; school yearbook staff, two years; member of school band and jazz band, four years; band vice - president; attended state band festival one year and state speech festival two years.

Preis will enroll as a pre-law student when USL's fall term opens next month.

DETROIT (AP) — Two-run homers by Bobby Knoop and Jose Cardenal led the Los Angeles Angels to a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

Knoop hit his home run in the second inning after the Tigers had taken the lead on Gates Brown's run-scoring triple in the first.

Cardenal delivered his 10th homer in the fifth. Both home runs came off Detroit starter Dave Wickersham, now 6-10.

Knoop picked up his third run batted in when he singled home Merrit Ranew in the sixth inning.

Solon Feels Regulation To Encourage Honesty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal commission with licensing and regulatory powers "can encourage honest men and keep the crooks out" of professional boxing, Rep. William L. Springer, R-Ill., feels.

Springer, ranking Republican on the House Commerce Committee, is co-sponsor with chairman Oren Harris, D-Ark., of a committee-approved bill which would set up a three-member boxing commission to be named by the President.

"Nothing can save professional boxing if it is left to the grabbers and grafters," Springer said.

The bill — introduced following criticism of the Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston heavyweight title fight in Lewiston, Maine — is to be considered by the House Monday under a procedure requiring a two-thirds vote for passage.

Springer discussed the proposal in an interview which went like this:

Q. Why is a federal boxing commission necessary?

A. Since 1927 the control of broadcasts and wire communications has been recognized as a federal responsibility. Today the revenue of professional boxing matches consists almost entirely of the sale of radio or closed-circuit television rights. Attendance in unimportant. Once these means are used to bring the matches into every community and perhaps every home it also becomes the duty of the government to police it.

Q. How would the commission go about it?

A. First, it would require all personnel connected with boxing, such as promotoers and managers, to be licensed. Such licenses would be issued after a look at the applicant's background and activities.

Second, the contracts used to set up a match will be scrutinized by the commission to see that they meet the rules applicable to them. If they do not conform, broadcast and wire facilities will be denied them.

Third, if there seems to be evidence of racketeering, extortion, fixing or any of the other evils possible, if not prevalent, in the fight game the commission may keep the fight off the air and the wires.

Q. How does the boxing fraternity feel about it?

A. All of the testimony before the committee favored the things included. As a matter of fact, the bill was changed radically after the hearings because Jack Dempsey and all the others felt a real necessity for licensing and for contract control.

Q. Would the commission take over the job of state commissions?

A. No. State commissions will continue as they are. An effort to acquire uniformity will be made but this will be entirely voluntary.

Cloninger Picks Up 17th Victory Of Year

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony Cloninger collected his seventh straight victory and 17th of the season while Gene Oliver hit his third and fourth home runs in two days as the surging Milwaukee Braves ripped the Chicago Cubs 8-2 Saturday.

Oliver hammered his 15th homer in the second inning and his 16th in the eighth. He banged two in the Braves' 8-3 triumph over the Cubs Friday. Mack Jones slammed his 22nd homer in the first inning.

The blasting boosted the Braves homer total to 18 in their last eight games and 153 for the season.

Cloninger, whose eight losses include four to the Cubs, scattered eight hits before leaving in the seventh. Loser Bill Faul, 2-3, was touched for six runs and six hits in six innings. But struck out seven and walked none.

The Braves scored two runs in the third on Eddie Mathews' double and Joe Torre's single. They got two unearned runs in the sixth as catcher Dick Roznovsky dropped the ball at the plate on a run-down play and Faul muffed a sacrifice by Frank Bolling.

Hank Aaron's second double added another run in the seventh off reliever Lindy McDaniel.

Ron Santo singled in a Cub run in the first inning and Roznovsky's sacrifice fly accounted for another in the third.

Dave Marr Ties Aaron For Lead

TOMMY AARON sags at the knees and bows his head as his ball, in foreground, fails to drop on the 11th green in Saturday's third round of play in the PGA Championship at Ligonier, Pa. Aaron, leader in the first two rounds of play, missed an 18 inch putt on the final hole and had to settle for a tie with Dave Marr. (AP Wirephoto)

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Dapper Dave Marr cautiously cut out a third round 70 Saturday and tied tiring Tommy Aaron at 209 for the third round lead in the PGA Championship while beleaguered Arnold Palmer quietly faded away.

Aaron, who was in and out of the lead all day, blew a chance to retain sole control of the No. 1 spot he had owned since opening day when he missed a 1½-foot par putt on the 18th hole.

He finished with a 72, one over par for the rolling, 7,090-yards of the par 36-35 Laurel Golf Club layout, and a 209. Marr, who skied to a double bogey six — through caution — on the same hole, had a third round 70.

Just one stroke back at 210 was the rebounding Gardner Dickinson, who put together two birds and 16 pars for a 69 after a confidence-shattering 74 in the second round.

Masters champion Jack Nicklaus, who was the overwhelming pre-tourney favorite, and Billy Casper shared fourth place at 211. Each made a major run at the leader, then faded under the scorching sun.

But Palmer, the troubled general of Arnie's Army, did the biggest fade. Actually it was more of a vanishing act. He took another double bogey — this one without the benefit of the two-stroke penalties that marked his first two rounds over his home course — and finished with a 74.

That gave the slump-ridden charger a 221, a shocking 12 strokes off the leader going into the final round for the one big title he has never captured and one he so desperately needed to again move to his spot atop the game.

He was 10 strokes back starting out Saturday, but still drew the biggest gallery, which waited and waited for the charge that never came. Instead, he took a bogey on the eighth, and a double bogey 6 on nine after his second shot went into the water.

There was some quickened hopes when he rallied for two birds, but he limped home with bogeys on 14, 15 and 17, and his head was down and his powerful, sloping shoulders slumped under his troubles when he reached No. 18.

Minnesota Hangs On For 31-21 Win

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Minnesota built up a big lead Saturday night but had to hang on to defeat Pittsburgh 31-21 in a National Football League exhibition game as the Steelers struck for three touchdowns in the last five minutes of play.

Until Pittsburgh quarterback Bill Nelson came into the game with about six minutes to go, the Steelers had been a lifeless, punchless ball club. But the three-year veteran scored one touchdown himself and passed for two — one for 60 yards and the other for 72.

Midway through the first period the Steelers moved the ball to the Minnesota 22 only to have Viking defensive back Ed Sharockman pick off an Ed Brown pass and return it 67 yards to the Pittsburgh 12.

On the next play Tommy Mason carried the ball to the three. Then Bill McWatters bulled his way off tackle for a touchdown on the following play.

McWatters' touchdown and a 32-yard field goal earlier by Fred Cox gave the Vikings a 10-0 lead.

With 10:30 left in the second period, Fran Tarkenton, who was on target all evening, connected with Tom Hall on a 45-yard touchdown pass play to give the Vikings a 17-0 margin.

Tarkenton also put on a dazzling one-man ground show as he continually ripped off big gains after being trapped while back to pass.

Nelson scored the Steelers' first touchdown, passed 60 yards to end Roy Jefferson for the second one, and passed 72 yards to rookie halfback Jim Butler for the last score.

Alabama Youth Captures Three Jaycee Firsts

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Richmond Flowers Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., won three first places Saturday in the track and field championships of the 1965 National Jaycee Sports Spectacular.

The 18-year-old son of Alabama's attorney general won the 100-yard dash and the 120 high and low hurdles.

His 9.8 in the 100 was one-tenth of a second faster than Ralph Brockington of Gainesville, Fla., and his 13.8 in the high hurdles edged Mike Robins of Waco, Tex., by the same margin.

Flowers' 18.6 in the low hurdles placed him well ahead of the runner-up, Bruce Gridley of Covina, Calif., with a 19.5.

Flowers' performances placed Alabama to the team championship with 21 points.

Homer Puts Icing On Phillies' Prize

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rich Allen's two-run homer climaxed a three-run eighth-inning rally and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-2 victory over San Francisco Saturday.

The blow jolted Juan Marichal, an 18-game winner, with his ninth defeat. Jim Bunning, with relief help from Jack Baldschun, brought his record to 15-7.

Marichal stopped the Phillies on five hits until the eighth. Then with one out, John Briggs singled, continued to second on Hal Lanier's wild throw and raced home with the tying run as Cookie Rojas singled.

After John Callison flied out, Allen drove his 15th homer over the right field fence.

The Giants took a 2-1 lead with single runs in the sixth and seventh. Matty Alou doubled in the sixth, was sacrificed to third and scored on Willie McCovey's sacrifice fly. In the next inning, Len Gabrielson tripled and came home as Tom Haller singled.

Callison's leadoff triple in the fourth and Tony Gonzalez' sacrifice fly gave the Phillies their first run.

McKinley, Scott Fight To Reach Meadow Finals

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Chuck McKinley of Port Washington, N.Y., ranked second in the country, and Gene Scott of St. James, N.Y., ranked fifth, struggled into the final round of the Meadow Club grass court invitation tennis tournament Saturday by defeating a couple of unheralded left-handed opponents in 2½-hour matches.

McKinley, playing only his second grass court event of the season, got by eighth-seeded Ian Crookenden of New Zealand, a UCLA junior, 6-4, 3-6, 13-11 6-3 after a tremendous display of service control in the key third set.

Scott, the defender, out-lasted unseeded and unranked Mark Cox of Great Britain, a Cambridge student, 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4. Scott took a 4-1 lead in the final set and then had to hold on for the victory.

McKinley's return of Crookenden's bullet serves kept him in control as did the fact that the New Zealander could score only two points in the last eight service games by the American in the 24-game third set.

McKinley, however, had to battle through six set points before nailing down this set. He had two in the 20th game, three in the 22nd when Crookenden pulled up from love-40, and another in the last game when Crookenden again fell to love-40.

McKinley broke Crookenden at love in the ninth game to win the first set and pulled from a 0-3 deficit in the second set.

Congress May Halt Amateur Power Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday Congress may take steps to halt the fight between the ruling powers of U.S. amateur athletics if the battling groups fail to reach an early truce.

Mansfield, the Senate majority leader, was one of several senators expressing concern lest the struggle for power and prestige between the Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association hurt both the young athletes involved and U.S. interests in world athletics.

Mansfield told a reporter he still hopes the two can end their feud without governmental intervention.

The Senate Commerce Committee headed by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., is to start two weeks of hearings Monday to bring out the facts about the protracted dispute.

The committee wants to know among other things whether athletes under the jurisdiction of one group risk reprisals if they compete in meets authorized by the other. It hopes also to learn whether such tactics hurt young athletes by restricting the competition they need to reach top form for international events, including the Olympic Games.

Mansfield said he plans to sit in one session of the committee's hearings.

"It is important," he said, "to get these outfits together in the best interests of American athletics, and I hope their split will be healed."

Asked what would happen if they don't agree, he said, "If they don't get together, then the chance for legislation is good."

Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., said federal legislation should be a matter of last resort, and "I'd hate to see it."

Allott, once a national AAU champion in the 400 meter hurdles, said he believes "the NCAA cannot surrender its responsibility for the welfare of college athletes" in their competition.

He said the row seems "childish" and should have been settled long ago.

Erath Dismissed After Dispute At PGA Tourney

LIGONIER, Pa. (UPI) — Veteran pro Paul Erath was told to "pick up his keys" Saturday and the Arnold Palmer controversy was marked closed with an apparent dismissal and a pair of expressed regrets from both interested parties.

Erath has served as resident professional and course superintendent since Laurel Valley Golf Club was opened in 1959. The controversy arose after Erath reportedly charged that the course, site of the PGA championship, had been altered to boost Palmer's chances of winning.

"Arnold's name should never have been mentioned," said Erath, explaining his side of the incident in a wavering voice. "I've known him since he was in school and I've been one of his greatest admirers of all time. We've never had a cross word."

A 60-foot fir tree planted Wednesday along the fairway on the third hole set off the whole furor, said Erath. If the tree went in, Erath told greens superintendent George Wyckoff, "I'll either leave now or Monday after the tournament ends." The tree went in.

"My patience had been stretched to no end," said Erath. "Putting in that tree was one of the most unreasonable requests that could have been made the day before a tournament."

"What hurt most," he added, "was that I'd been barn-storming for a year, saying we'd do nothing to trick up or change the course for the tournament. Then to have to help change it the day before the championship—it hurt my pride."

"It's too late for a resignation now," said Erath. "A foreman came around Friday night and said he'd been told to pick up my keys. He didn't want to do it. I spent an hour with him on my front porch telling him it was the right thing to do."

Bitterly, he added, "Wyckoff didn't even have the decency to tell me in person that I'd been fired. If that's an example of big business, I'll stay in small business."

Riser Meets

Coach C. O. Wink said Saturday night all prospective football players attending Riser Junior High School are asked to report to the school gym at 4 p.m. Monday.

Local Raceway Has New Name

The Traweek Brothers Raceway, formerly the West Monroe Speedway, will begin officially under its new name today, according to a track spokesman.

Time trials for the circle stock car racing event are set for 1:30 p.m. with running to start at 2 p.m.

Track officials say the detour to the track off the Jonesboro Road in West Monroe will be marked.

OPHS Physicals

Ouachita Parish High School football players will be given physical examinations today, according to a spokesman for the coaching staff. Freshman and varsity players are scheduled to report at the high school's gymnasium at 2 p.m. for the physicals.

Oilers Win 2nd Straight Exhibition Contest, 29-7

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Houston Oilers unleashed a mighty offense and an equally strong defense Saturday night against the Buffalo Bills to crush the American Football League champions, 29-7 in an exhibition game.

The Oilers, propelled by veteran quarterback George Blanda and second-year man Don Trull, exploded for a total of 260 yards, 159 of them through the air. On defense, meanwhile, Houston limited the Bills to 107 yards, passing and rushing.

Houston, in winning its second consecutive pre-season game, struck for a touchdown after 1:38 of the first period. Buffalo's Jack Kemp fumbled on the third play of the game and John Frongillo pounced on the ball at the Bills' 19. Three plays later, Blanda found Sammy Weir for a 22-yard scoring play.

The Oilers added nine points in the second period as rookie Jim Hayes caught Daryle Lamonica in the end zone for a safety and halfback Ode Burrell raced 48 yards off right guard for a touchdown. Blanda booted the second of his three extra points.

Blanda also accounted for two field goals — a 42-yarder and one for 37 yards.

W. K. Hicks also scored for Houston as he intercepted rookie Mailon Kent's pass on the 13 and scampered into the end zone. It was the second reception of Kent's first three passes. The first one led to Blanda's second field goal.

Kent, of Auburn, redeemed himself, however as he directed Buffalo 28 yards to a score in the closing minutes. He handed the ball off to rookie Bob Curington of North Carolina, who crashed over from the three-yard line.

Pete Gogolak, who missed field goal attempts of 48 and 47 yards for the Bills, added the extra point.

State Agency Protests Cut In Duck Season

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission has issued strong protests against proposed drastic cuts in the limited duck season allowed last year.

Commission Director J. D. Hair Jr. pointed out, in a statement Friday that waterfowl breeding conditions were much improved in Canada this summer.

Proposals to cut the season were made this week during the annual meeting in Washington, of the Waterfowl Advisory Committee and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

In a telegram to Louisiana's congressional delegation, Hair said:

"On behalf of Louisiana's 100,000 waterfowl hunters, we protest strongly this unwarranted action and urge that you prevail on Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall to see that we are allowed the same duck hunting regulations as last year . . ."

COMIN' UP AFIELD

Duck Season May Be Cut

With Sam Hanna

Birds In Washington

That old battle between Louisiana and federal officials over the duck season is being fought again

Director Joe Hair of The Louisiana Wildlife Service is considering one of three alternatives for the duck season this year in the Mississippi Flyway.

None look good.

Joe says the plans under consideration are 40 days with two ducks including one big greenhead (terrible), or only 35 days with three ducks, including one mallard (worse), and every bit of 25 days with four ducks, including A mallard (just a shade better than no season at all).

That's the unofficial report from Washington.

So off to Washington goes Joe Hair and assistant Dick Yancey, who has forgotten more about ducks than most people will ever know, to meet with other Mississippi Flyway directors Tuesday.

Directors of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky will meet with members of a wildlife congressional committee headed by Congressman John D. Dingell of Michigan. Congressional delegates of those states are being asked to attend also.

The purpose of the meeting is to protest anything less than a 40-day season with a four-duck limit, including two mallards. That's what the Mississippi Flyway Council recommended last week at St. Louis.

This, of course, is not the first time that Louisiana has joined in on a protest against restrictions advocated by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service under the U.S. Department of the Interior.

In fact, a few years ago Louisiana led the way in preventing the bureau from closing the duck season. Since then the season has been a little better each year.

But the fact that's disturbing is the difference in reports on the waterfowl outlook from Canada by the federal and state governments.

Federal officials are saying the fall flights of ducks are expected to be no better than last year in the Mississippi, Atlantic and Central flyways. They expect a small decrease in the Pacific Flyway.

But during the week of July 18-23rd a Louisiana delegation, including Dick Yancey and Dr. Leslie L. Glasgow, LSU professor of game management, flew the Canadian nesting grounds, and later reported:

"The fall flight of ducks into the Mississippi Flyway is going to be very good and in excess of last year."

The Louisiana group found nesting conditions to be much improved and the waterfowl population on the increase. Yet the federal government says otherwise.

So the battle continues.

Perhaps the meeting Tuesday in Washington will prevent the Fish & Wildlife Service from restricting its recommendations to the Department of Interior in regards to the Mississippi Flyway framework.

Anything less than a four-duck bag limit won't help the sale of duck stamps. A two-mallard limit is tough enough.

Deer Survey Begins

A worthwhile conservation project will begin Monday when a team of pathologists and parasitologists headed by Dr. Frank A. Hayes of Georgia conducts a study of deer on the Georgia-Pacific Wildlife Management Area at Bastrop.

It is part of the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study participated in by 11 southeastern states, including Louisiana.

Sportsmen should not become alarmed that the study is being made at Georgia - Pacific. The area was not selected because biologists felt the deer there are diseased. That's not the case.

But the purpose of the study is to conduct more research into diseases that kill deer — like Brucellosis and Anthrax. About a dozen adult deer will be taken from the Georgia-Pacific area to make the study.

If you'll recall about two years back, the deer herd on Beulah Island in Arkansas was wiped out by Anthrax. A major deer die-off on the island led Arkansas game officials to bring Dr. Hayes in for an investigation.

The point we're making is that the work performed by Dr. Hayes and his group is vital in efforts to prevent such die - offs as Beulah Island in Arkansas.

But if you really want to learn more about this work and more about deer in general, you can learn by attending the public meetings that will be held by Dr. Hayes on his visit to Louisiana.

He will speak Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Morehouse Parish courthouse and Thursday night at 7:30 at the Madison Parish courthouse. A series of color slides showing some of the more common diseases and parasites of whitetail deer will be shown at both meetings.

Dr. Hayes is a noted professional in his field.

Any - Deer Issue

It looks like the any-deer issue will never cease to be an issue in Louisiana. Other states have used the any-deer season for game management for years, but Louisiana is still struggling with tradition.

This year the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission — after sending its representatives all over the state talking to police juries about the upcoming deer season — set a limited any-deer season.

In our area, the commission called for a one-day any-deer season on Russell Sage and Georgia-Pacific, in addition to a five-day any - deer season on the Union Game Management Area and the Chicago Mill Game Management Area. Also, at the request of the Tensas Police Jury, a three-day season was set in Wards 1 and 3 of Tensas.

Archers in most parishes were granted any-deer seasons. So few deer are killed with bow and arrow anyway.

But, the press quoted Gov. McKeithen this week as saying he would not go along with the any-deer seasons.

Joe Hair told us on the phone Friday that the matter will be discussed by the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission at its next meeting, August 24th.

You will recall last year that the Legislature, in special session, quickly adopted a resolution closing the any-deer season on the Chicago Mill area, as well as in East Carroll. That left a few other spots open, but fortunately hunters didn't overcrowd those areas.

But in the interest of all areas, if the commission closes the any-deer season — and certainly it will since the governor wants them closed — all areas should be closed and not just one or two.

Personally, although we've never killed a doe deer and never intend to, we take the position that the wildlife program should be run by the professionals — the biologists. We know that's not popular in some circles, but we are certainly opposed to our wildlife department being run by political pressure.

Little Man's Corner

It was like fall and the little men made news afield.

Jack Gray of 401 Wilma in Monroe landed a gar in the Ouachita River that must have been a big one. Reportedly, the fish weighed over 150 pounds.

At Black Bayou some Monroe fishermen had quite a bit of luck. Tom Walters Jr. landed a 6½ - pound bass while Orland Beavers caught a string of 43 bream.

Alfred Treadway, still at Black Bayou, landed a bream that weighed 1-lb., 15-oz., while Donald Smith and Jeffery Scott caught 100 white perch. Paul Arceneaux came out with 47 bream.

Also locally, S. F. Smith and John Arnold caught 61 specs while Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stewart got 100. Oscar Alford and Bill Hamilton landed 78 chinks and bream.

On another trip, Donald Smith and Jeff Scott came back and got 97 specs.

And at Lake Providence, Vacel Razer caught 10 bass. Mrs. Morris Coleman and Mrs. Sam Foutz landed a string of 50 fish at the River Chute.

Mrs. T. L. McKeithen of Ferriday got the limit of bass in Lake Concordia where John Eames of Ferriday landed the limit of bream on a fly. Jack St. John of Ferriday caught the limit of bass in Wallace Lake at Jonesville.

A WINNSBORO FAMILY, Dr. and Mrs. Lamar Little and their sons, fished 1½ days off the Miami coast recently, landing this impressive string of fish. Stephen (left), 14, and McHenry, 13, each hooked a sailfish at the same time and both boys successfully boated their fish in about 30 minutes. John (right), 10, caught two rare wahoos, each over 4 feet long. Dr. and Mrs. Little caught two 250-pound groupers and a rare 25-pound gag grouper along with 17 dolphin, a few bonitas, barracudas and one 45-pound amberjack.

Davis Cup Team Mystery

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Here it is only a couple of days before the Davis Cup teams of the United States and Spain take the courts for their interzone final but the make-up of the American team still is a mystery.

"There is only one thing wrong with this squad," said non-playing captain George MacCall of Los Angeles, "and that is the captain. He can't make up his mind which U.S. players will oppose Manuel Santana and his comrades Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday."

The U.S. is the American Zone champion and Spain is the European Zone titleholder. The winner here will play the Asian Zone representative, either India or Japan, sometime after Oct. 1 for the right to challenge Australia late in December.

MacCall said he was certain that Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., would play in both singles and doubles but beyond that he was not sure.

"The entire squad is in good physical condition and each player also is mentally ready. The weather here has been perfect the past 10 days and we have been working as much as six hours a day getting adjusted to the slower Spanish courts," he added.

The matches will be played at the Barcelona Royal Tennis Club, where the courts are of the all-weather type with a softer and more porous surface than the Americans have encountered previously.

The draw will be made Monday noon and MacCall has until then to name his players for Tuesday's singles. The doubles selections need not be named until late Tuesday.

Lopez Pulls Yanks Over Kansas City

NEW YORK (AP) — Hector Lopez, a pinch hitter, singled home the tying and winning runs in the ninth inning as the New York Yankees came from behind and pulled out a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday.

The triumph, which enabled the Yankees to reach the .500 mark in games won and lost for the first time since May 1, was witnessed by a paid crowd of 44,263 attracted by the second Bat Day of the year at Yankee Stadium. Each youngster under 14, accompanied by an adult, received a Little League bat free.

The Yankees' ninth inning rally spoiled a perfect afternoon for Kansas City shortstop Bert Campaneris, who staged a one-man show.

He had a perfect afternoon at the plate with four singles, scored one run and drove in the other and stole a base, his 41st of the season. In addition he made a sparkling catch of a line drive which he turned into a rally-killing double play.

The Yankees came to bat for the last time trailing 2-1. John Wyatt, who had bailed out starter Fred Talbot in the seventh, retired the first batter.

Johnny Romano Drives In Four In Chicago Win

BOSTON (AP) — Johnny Romano, one of the Chicago White Sox' major disappointments this year, drove in four runs with a homer and a single Saturday in a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Romano capped a four-run first inning with his 11th homer with two aboard and then drove in another run with a line single to center in the third.

The White Sox then hung on for the triumph as relief ace Eddie Fisher checked the Red Sox after being summoned from the bullpen for his 59th appearance of the year in the sixth inning.

Fisher didn't allow a hit in preserving the triumph for southpaw Gary Peters, who bailed out starter Bruce Howard in the first and then needed help himself in the sixth. Peters, a 20-game winner in 1964, now has a 7-10 record.

The White Sox jumped on Boston started Jim Lonborg for all their runs in handing the rookie right-hander his 14th defeat. Lonborg has won only six.

ROOFENNANY

MAYSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—The Mason County Historical Society labeled its musical event on Limestone Creek a "roofenany."

It wasn't because the volume raised the roof, but because the project sought funds to restore the roof to Mefford's fort, a log cabin built of logs floated down the Ohio River as rafts by pioneers. The State of Kentucky wanted to make the cabin a shrine.

Miss Futrell Is Bride Of Thomas Kirkpatrick

Miss Sandra Gail Futrell became the bride of Thomas Killgore Kirkpatrick Saturday, August 14, in the First Baptist church of Pineville. Dr. F. R. Houston Smith heard the exchange of vows at 4 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Elmo Futrell Jr., of Pineville. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Alva Benjamin Russell of Jena; and Mr. and Mrs. Perry Elmo Futrell of Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Kirkpatrick of Baton Rouge are parents of the groom. Mrs. Thomas Morton Killgore of Lisbon and Monroe, and the late Mr. Killgore are his maternal grandparents; Mrs. Eugene Kirkpatrick of Lake Charles and the late Mr. Kirkpatrick, paternal grandparents.

Cathedral candles formed an archway at the altar of the church. On each side were standards of white asters and gladioli and tree candelabra. Music was provided by Mason Campbell, organist, and A. A. Kelley Jr. soloist.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of off white silk satin with closely molded bodice embroidered in seed pearls. The pearl motif was repeated on the bell skirt which flowed into a full cathedral train. A large satin rose embroidered with pearls held her three-tiered veil of French illusion. She carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and stephanotis centered with a white orchid.

Miss Linda Johnson of Pineville was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Kay Kirkpatrick of Baton Rouge, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Diane Joyner of Boyce, Miss Linda Pettus of Pineville, Miss Sandra Mabry of Shreveport, and Miss Karen Keller of Churchpoint. They wore identical dresses of aqua crepe and brocade, styled on Empire lines. Deep aqua French brocade was used for bodice and back panel, over a skirt of crepe in lighter aqua. The maid of honor carried a single long stemmed Butterfly rose, and each bridesmaid, a single Tropicana rose.

Kris Kirkpatrick of Baton Rouge was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Tom Powers and Joe Melton of Baton Rouge; Ronnie Futrell of Pineville, brother of the bride; Gene Kirkpatrick of Lake Charles and Ronnie Welch of Manchester, Connecticut, both cousins of the groom. Bob Janzen of Alexandria and Perry Lee Futrell of Pineville, the bride's cousin, were ushers. Russell Futrell of Pineville, brother of the bride, and Bruce Kirkpatrick, Lake Charles, cousin of the groom, lighted the candles.

Mrs. Futrell chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of soft pink crepe with matching overblouse of a lace and ribbon knit, with a small hat of pink feathers. Mrs. Kirkpatrick wore jade green silk chiffon with overblouse of hand - run Alencon lace. Her hat was of crushed maline in matching shade. Each wore a corsage of white orchids.

MRS. THOMAS KILGORE KIRKPATRICK

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Mrs. Grady E. Welch greeted guests at the door. A trellis interwoven with greenery and white asters formed a background for the receiving line. Arrangements of white gladioli and asters decorated the reception rooms.

White tuberoses and asters were placed on the table with the bride's book. Misses Susan Sams and Carolyn Morris invited guests to register.

The bride's cake was placed on a round table covered with white tulle over satin, caught up at intervals with swags of green grapes and leather leaf fern. Mrs. Gladys Foster and Mrs. Prince A. Cain, both aunts of the bride, cut the cake.

A similar cloth covered the punch table, which was centered with an antique five-branch silver epergne filled with Elegant white carnations, tuberoses, and clusters of grapes arranged in a fountain effect. A silver punch bowl was placed at each end of the table. Those who served were Mrs. Louis Bonnette, aunt of the groom, and Mesdames Thomas R. Henry Jr., Ernest Clooney, and Henry Gahagan, aunts of the groom.

On a third table, also covered with white and decorated with grapes and greenery, was an illuminated punch fountain. Mrs. Walter Holsomback assisted here. Tea girls were Misses Betty Kay Willet, Carla Willet, and Kathey Willet, cousins of the bride, and Miss Carolyn Atkins. Rice bags were distributed by Misses Glenda Russell, Juanita Russell, and Rebecca Russell, cousins of the bride, and Elizabeth Killgore and Elaine Henry cousins of the bridegroom.

Miss Myra Alyce DeMoss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. DeMoss, and William R. Roper, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Roper, were united in marriage at the Methodist church in Tallulah, Saturday, August 7, at 10 a.m. The Rev. Clark Bell, assisted by the Rev. John Hurt, performed the double ring ceremony.

Floor baskets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums and pedestal candelabra decorated the marriage scene. Miss Kay DeMoss, sister of the bride, lighted the candles. Wedding music was presented by Mrs. J. M. Gilfoil, organist, and Mrs. Tommy Wixson, soloist.

Mr. DeMoss escorted his daughter and gave her in marriage. Her gown of gossamer silk over peau de soie was styled on princess lines with Florentine neckline highlighted by a pearl-embroidered floral motif. Pearl encrusted Chantilly lace bordered the floor length skirt and the Watteau train which fell from the shoulders. A princess crown of lace and pearls held her veil of imported illusion. She carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a purple throated orchid.

Miss Melonie Crothers, the bride's only attendant, wore a gown of white georgette over peau de soie with cummerbund caught in a bow with streamers. Her flowers were white carnations and a chaplet of tiny fresh chrysanthemums formed her headdress.

Edward Yerger, Jr., of Mound, served as best man. Ushers were William M. DeMoss, Jr., brother of the bride, Chapman Lee, Bill Pippin, Bill Adams, and Ilar Osborne, Jr.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. DeMoss wore an ice blue silk sheath with matching accessories. The groom's mother, Mrs. Roper, chose azure blue silk with white accessories. Their corsages were of white carnations.

A reception in the fellowship hall followed the ceremony. Miss Mary Beth DeMoss and Miss Joyce DeMoss invited guests to register at a table decorated with pale pink althea blooms and ivy. The bride's table, was decorated with an arrangement of white asters, chrysanthemums and greenery with three slender white tapers. Crystal candelabra with white tapers flanked the centerpiece. Mrs. Pat Gilfoil presided at the punch service. At an adjoining table, Mrs. Richard Powell of Monroe, and Mrs. C. L. Norred, sisters of the groom, served the bride's cake.

Floating hostesses were Mrs. Barbara Jo Reeves, Miss Betty DeMoss, Miss Susan Grace and Miss Jennifer Colvin. Assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. M. C. Owen and Mrs. Jim Parker.

When the couple left for a trip to Texas and the Ozarks, the bride was wearing a two piece blue and white striped suit, white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will live in Monroe, where both are students at Northeast Louisiana State college.

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

This week there was a party of double pleasure: guests were introduced to a charming newcomer to Monroe, GLADNEY PEYTON, and viewed the lovely new home of JO and BILL MATTISON on Country Club road. JO and WALLY MacARTHUR were hostesses for the affair on Friday afternoon between three and five.

Gladney has recently moved to Monroe with husband THOMAS PEYTON and children LYNN, CLAIRE, and JOHN, from Rochester, Minnesota. They have many relatives and friends in this area, as Gladney was originally from New Orleans and Thomas from DeQuincey.

JO and BILL MATTISON's new home was completed several weeks ago. It is located on a lot which extends through the block, fronting on both Country Club and Lakeside Drive. Twin facades face these streets. Construction is of antique brick obtained from the old City Hall of West Monroe when it was torn down. Square brick columns at ground level support the overhanging second story gallery. Here wood siding and wooden balustrade are painted beige. Dark brown shutters are used throughout, closing over eighteen-light windows.

One enters through a beautiful natural wood door, which was opened by CLARA MONTGOMERY for Friday's party. Gladney and her hostesses Jo and Wally, stood in the entrance, a brick-floored area separated from the living room by a change in level. A large plant stand filled with greenery decorated the area.

Three steps down to the left is the living room, a spacious room with ceiling two stories above the floor. Walls are white and floor of random-width oak. Two banks of windows filled the wall on the front side of the house. Under the windows are the sofa, covered in green and white ticking, and a wool hooked rug featuring a green pattern against a beige background. Focal point of the room is Jo's great-grandmother's rosewood piano, in a corner under the stairs which climb the back wall. A five-branched white and crystal epergne filled with tube roses and yellow daisies stood on the piano Friday . . . . Against the far wall of the living room is an antique walnut commode. Above hangs a shadow box in which are framed against gold velvet Jo's grandmother's pendant and locket, her grandfather's watch fob.

Through a door in this wall is the white-walled dining room, also floored in oak. On the wall to the left, three double doors cover marvelous storage area. Opposite, to the right as one enters, is a marble-topped English hunt board. Double French doors open into a future formal garden.

A bouquet of yellow roses in a silver bowl centered the dining table. Coffee was served at one end; and opposite, cola punch in silver goblets. Glad's aunts, VAN GLADNEY and DOROTHY GLADNEY of Bastrop poured. The buffet menu included olive and nut sandwiches, tiny fudge squares, jelly cookies, and cheese straws. A large silver shell overflowing with fresh green grapes stood on the hunt board.

Unusual feature in the kitchen is the black wrought iron chandelier with tiny votive lights. Here the floor is brick and cabinets painted antique green house equipment and storage.

Two steps down from the entrance is the family room. Here the ceiling is supported by cypress beams over 100 years old, taken from an old cotton compress in Vicksburg. Walls are a combination of walnut panelling and old brick, with brick flooring. One end of the room is filled with a massive fireplace and raised hearth. Three double French doors open onto the brick - paved courtyard which opens in turn onto the Lakeside drive entrance.

For Friday's party, Jo used a pair of brass scales filled with lemons and ivy at one end of the mantel. Yellow candles in a variety of sizes stood at the other end. In a corner was an antique standing bowl filled with fresh fruit and vegetables.

A second refreshment table was set up Friday in the family dining area at one end of the room. Here the centerpiece was a wicker basket overflowing with gold and bronze chrysanthemums. Glad's cousin, SHELBY GLADNEY of Vidalia; and her aunt, WAYNE GLADNEY of Shreveport, poured here. Others who assisted were ANN PADGETT, BROOKSIE HAMAKER, CAROL CUDD, and MARY LEE KING.

To the right of the entranceway is a hall leading to the guest suite and to the master bedroom. The latter has two triple doored closets, plus a third closet just for Jo's sewing machine and equipment. The room opens onto the courtyard through French doors . . . Upstairs is an apartment for daughters MEREDITH and BLANCHE. The long bedroom features serviceable child-type beds and chests as well as a collection of antique doll furniture. Three French doors open onto the balcony overhanging the courtyard.

Another party honoring Glad this teek was a luncheon given Wednesday by VIRGINIA GUERRIERO at her home on Pargoud boulevard. Twelve guests were seated at a table centered with salmon-colored zinnias. The hostess served party chicken in patty shells, asparagus, and spiced peaches, with lemon-filled sponge cake for dessert.

HOME AGAIN after two years abroad is ALLEN FOSTER. Allen arrived Wednesday afternoon, bringing his wife LOUISE, and young son CHARLES, who was born in England last August 27. The Fosters have been living in Oxford, where Allen attended Brasenose college for the past two years. This summer he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in jurisprudence, winning a "First," one of only four awarded in the entire university and highest honon conferred at Oxford. The Fosters will be here as guests of his parents, BESSIE and CHICK FOSTER, for several weeks. They will move to Cambridge, Mass., in September, when Allen is to enroll in Harvard Law school.

Speaking of our students abroad, SUSAN SPERRY leaves today for France, where she is to spend her junior year at the University of Tours. KATHY McSHERRY, who will also attend the college, plans to leave later in the month to join Susan overseas . . . . These two were honored at luncheon Thursday when JAN ADCOCK and MINTA GOYNE entertained in the Garden Room at Bayou DeSiard country club. Seven guests were seated at a table centered with a bouquet of vari-colored zinnias.

'Twas a busy household at the ZELL SMITH residence on Forsythe last weekend. Visitors from Memphis were their granddaughter, MRS. WILLIAM BATEMAN, and her daughters, ELIZABETH KEY (who divided their time with her aunt, BETH and WILLIE McGOUGH on Park avenue); and MR. and MRS. HOLLIS HOLMES (she is Herndon's sister) . . . . Also present for the weekend was ZELL SMITH III, a student at Louisiana Tech. He stopped off for a visit with these relatives before leaving for Trinidad, West Indies, to spend a month with his parents, MR. and MRS. ZELL SMITH JR.

Prior to his departure Thursday for service in the armed forces, JAMES SMITH JR., was honored at farewell supper. ANN HODGE was hostess for the informal party at her home. Six guests attended.

It's a fourteenth grandchild for WILHEMINA INABNET, who received word this week of the birth of a son August 4 to PAM and BARLOW INABNET in Greensboro, North Carolina. The baby, who has been named W. BARLOW III, has two older sisters, CATHY and LUCY. The maternal grandparents are the PAUL DEXHEIMERS of Somerset, Kentucky.

Vacationing in Mexico are NANCY and JUDGE DAVIS and their son ROOKIE. The three left last week to join her parents, the A. D. COBBS in Baton Rouge for the trip.

Swimming in the Atlantic and a trip to the World's Fair were highlights of a vacation trip for BETTY SCHONLAU and her daughters, MARTHA and DEBORAH SCHONLAU. They visited Betty's mother, MRS. JOHN ten EYCK and her sister, MRS. EDWARD SKIPWORTH, in Franklin Park, New Jersey for about three weeks, returned home Wednesday. . . . Meanwhile LISA, another of Betty's daughters, made a trip to California with the Junior Classical League, returned last night.

Three young girls from Alexandria have been visiting here as guests of their grandmother, ANNA SLAGLE, and great-grandmother, MAE WOOTEN. Last week LEE SLAGLE PIERSON was here, and was honored with a luncheon Wednesday in here grandmother's home. Yesterday PATTY PIERSON and a ANNE PIERSON arrived, to be here for the coming week. They are all daughters of the HUNTER PIERSON.

Our poem today is "I Hear It Said" by Barbara Young.

Last night my friend — he says he is my friend —
Came in and questioned me. "I hear it said
You have done this and that. I come to ask
Are these things true?" His words were crisp and hot.
Suppose I have? And are you not my friend?
And are you not my friend enough to say,
"If it were true, there would be reason in it."
Is friendship just a thing of afternoons,
Of pleasuring one's friend and one's dear self?
No. Friendship is not so. I am my own.
And howsoever near my friend may draw
Unto my soul, there is a legend hung
Above a certain straight and narrow way
Says "Dear my friend, ye may not enter here!"
I would the time has come — as it has not —
When man shall rise and say, "He is my friend.
He has done this? And what is that to me!
I am his friend. And for that cause I walk
Not overclose beside him, leaving still Space for his silences, and space for mine."

The Rev. David Felder performed the ceremony in a setting of cathedral tapers alternating with massive arrangements of white California gladioli, stock, and agapanthia, in white urns atop Gothic pedestals. Music was provided by Mrs. David Anders, organist, and Mrs. Ronald Luno, soloist.

Guy Albert Luno Jr., escorted his sister and gave her in marriage. The bride was wearing a gown of pale ivory silk organza over taffeta with Empire bodice of reembroidered Alencon lace. The slim skirt flowed into a court train. She wore a mantilla of imported silk illusion appliqued with reembroidered Alencon lace. MOON TOE-TESTER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Before two-legged man sets foot on the moon, a three-legged Surveyor will gingerly dip in a toe — so that a space "first" keeps safety first. An unmanned Surveryor will soft-land and scrutinize the lunar terrain to determine if it is dusty or crusty before man risks his life learning whether the moon's Sea of Tranquility is truly tranquil or its Sea of Serenity is surely serene.

Seven Surveyor spacecraft are being built by Hughes Aircraft Company for the U. S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration under direction of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The first will be launched before the end of 1965 from Cape Kennedy by an Atlas-Centaur rocket for a 64-hour flight to the moon.

Your Problems

Newspaper Needn't Say Who Individual Is NOT

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We moved to this city 15 years ago and my husband has made a fine reputation for himself in the community.

About five years ago a man whose name is identical to my husband's (middle name and all) moved to this city. This man has been arrested for drunk driving, disturbing the peace and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. We become terribly upset whenever this man's name appears in the paper — which is often.

His address and age are always stated but we feel the paper should either run the man's picture or they should add, "not the Sam Smith who was chairman of the Red Cross drive in 1963." The publisher refuses to do this. We feel it is unfair. What is your opinion? — MISTAKEN IDENTIY

Dear Mistaken: Sorry, but a newspaper has no obligation to identify an individual by stating who he is not.

By this time, almost everyone in town must know there's an unlesirable character around whose name is the same as your husband's, so stop worrying about nothing.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

There's A Church Home For You in the Twin Cities...

In God is great man's hope.

Anyone desiring to know the location of a church of any denomination in the Twin Cities and the time of its Sunday services may call The Morning World at 323-2070, FA 3-3660, FA 3-0501 and ask for the church service directory. We'll be glad to supply you the information.

THIS IS A SCENE from the Hill Cumorah Pageant presented recently near Palmyra, New York by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It depicts King Benjamin who made eloquent exhortation to his people to follow in the ways of the Lord in ancient America. The pageant was titled, "America's Witness For Christ."

Abbey Reaches 900 Year Mark

By GODFREY ANDERSON

LONDON (AP) — Westminster Abbey, the shrine where England's kings and queens are crowned, is preparing for the 900th anniversary of its consecration in 1065.

The commemoration will last a full year — from next Dec. 28 to Dec. 28, 1966.

"We have chosen the theme One People to give unity, structure and coherence to the events of the year," says Dean Eric S. Abbott. "Westminster Abbey, though part of the Church of England, is entirely nonsectarian. We feel the abbey belongs to the people. We only exclude those who exclude themselves."

The abbey's 900th year coincides with completion of the restoration of its interior, which was begun at the time of Queen Elizabeth II's coronation in 1953. The stonework now looks cleaner than for many years.

The Isle of Thorns amidst the riverside marshes of Westminster, some miles to the west of the old City of London, first had a monastic foundation as early as the 7th century. The Great Church of Abbey of St. Peter was finished by King Edward the Confessor in 1065. The king, who was afterward declared a saint, is buried there.

William The Conqueror

The first king crowned in Westminster Abbey was William the Conqueror, on Christmas Day of 1066. All subsequent English monarchs have been crowned there except two — and they were both Edwards.

Edward V was one of the illfated boy princes murdered in the Tower of London in 1483, perhaps by order of their uncle who succeeded to the throne as King Richard III.

Edward VIII abdicated the throne in 1936 to marry the American divorcee, Wallis Warfield Simpson. He is today the Duke of Windsor, uncle of the queen.

Practically nothing remains of Edward the Confessor's abbey. The great Gothic building across the street from the Houses of Parliament dates from King Henry III, who died in 1272. He pulled down Edward's church to erect what he called "the most lovely and lovable thing in Christendom."

The new abbey was built in the early English style with pointed arches and lancet windows. It was largely modelled on Rheims.

It was King Richard II who had the job completed, extending the great nave further westward at the end of the 14th century. He lies buried with his wife, Anne of Bohemia, in the abbey.

Special Status

Today the abbey enjoys special status as what is called a Royal Peculiar. That means that it does not form part of the Diocese of London but is directly under the Queen's own jurisdiction. Even the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, who is primate of all England and spiritual head of the Church of England, cannot enter Westminster Abbey unless the dean invites him.

Arrangements for the 9th centenary celebrations are thus entirely in the hands of Dean Abbott and the Abbey Chapter, the governing body of canons.

To get plans launched, the dean called newsmen to a modern cocktail party in his historic 14th century residence, which was originally part of the abbot's house adjoining the abbey. There is the historic Jerusalem chamber — where King Henry IV died after suffering a coronary while at prayer; and his son, Henry V, tried on the crown in his presence, a scene immortalized by Shakespeare — the dean said the main events of the commemoration year would fall on the feast days of St. Benedict whose monks started the foundation; St. Peter, for whom the abbey is named; and St. Edward the Confessor who built the original abbey.

Dean's Hopes

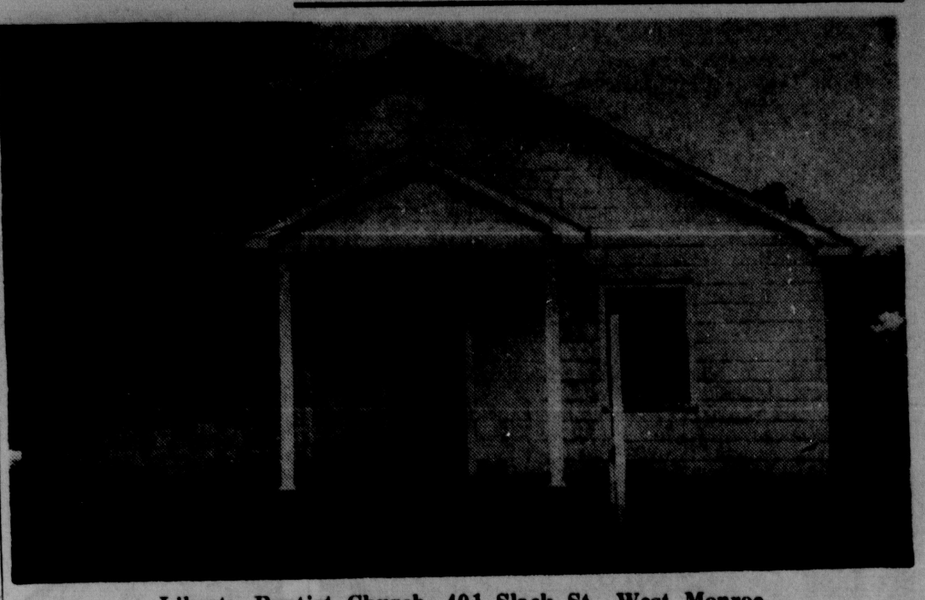
The dean hopes there will be a full representation of monks from Benedictine abbeys in Europe — not least those from Monte Cassino, the Italian monastery destroyed in World War II and since rebuilt — for St. Benedict's Day, March 21.

Other events will include nightly floodlighting of the delicate tracery of the abbey's Gothic architecture, exhibitions and lectures, music festivals, and a summer fair in Dean's Yard, adjoining the abbey.

The dean said leaders of many other churches had promised to attend and it was hoped to have a specially strong representation from the Eastern Orthodox Church, which is next year resuming theological discussions with the Anglican Church.

Washington's Episcopalian Cathedral will send its choir to England to sing at abbey services for two weeks after Easter. It is hoped that the U.S. ambassador will attend to read the lessons.

Festive new copes to be worn during the 900th anniversary year by the dean and abbey clergy are being woven on looms at Versailles, which have not been used for weaving since Versailles Palace was built in the 17th century.



Liberty Baptist Church, 401 Slack St., West Monroe.

Gain In Work Is Reported At Liberty Baptist Church

Liberty Baptist Church, 401 Slack St., West Monroe, was started about four years ago in Monroe, and occupied several locations before coming to its present site.

The congregation was organized and held meeting for awhile at a location on Louisville Avenue, moving from there to North 3rd St., and to Ticheli Road, off of Winnsboro Road.

The Rev. John Dallalio was one of the pastors in the early days of the church, and moved with it to the present location when a building was purchased from the Slack Street Church of Christ.

The Rev. W. L. Fontenot, present pastor, came to the church Sept. 14, 1964.

Basic Beliefs

He explained that the basic beliefs taught by the church, which is independent, are the same as those taught by those affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention, but it differs in the assignment of money for mission work. The church sends money direct to the mission fields instead of channeling it through a special church agency.

A full schedule of activities is carried out at Liberty Church. On Sunday this includes Bible School at 9:45 a.m. and preaching services at 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Preaching services are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m. also.

A regular program of home visitation is carried out by members of the church. The ladies conduct regular weekly visitation at 9:30 a.m. on Thursdays, and a church-wide participation in visitation is conducted at 7 p.m. on Thursdays.

The young people's activities expansion is a goal of the church, the pastor said.

Youth Activities

"We are planning one social a month for the youth as part of their activity," said Rev. Fontenot.

Rev. Fontenot came to Liberty Church from the Fundamental Baptist Church of Palmer, Texas. A native of south Louisiana, he grew up at Collinston, where he surrendered to ministry in 1958.

He is married. They have two children, a son, Garry Louis, 9, and a daughter, Donna Sue, 11.

A loan was made available recently to complete payments on the church property, and other gains have been made, said the pastor.

The church has purchased a bus which will be ready for the road soon. It will be used to pick up church goers to help solve their transportation problems. A regular passenger pickup route will be established, said Rev. Fontenot.

Sunday School

J. L. Phillips is Sunday school superintendent and also deacon.

The Bible school held at the church during the period of July 16-20 drew an average attendance of 55 children, and from the offerings taken up a total of eight dollars was sent to mission work.

The pastor's daughter, who is a talented musician, is the church's pianist. She is the first to serve in that capacity since the church moved to its present location.

The pastor said the church is showing definite signs of growth, with quite a few visitors showing up for services every Sunday.

"This shows an increasing interest in the church," he said.

During August, Sunday school attendance has averaged about 55, and preaching services drew an average attendance of from 70 to 75.

Rev. Fontenot conducted the first revival held at his church shortly after his arrival here.

Church Sets Start Today Of Crusade

A city-wide crusade will open today at the Fair Grounds building in West Monroe and continue through Sunday, August 29 under the sponsorship of West Monroe Free Methodist Church, it was announced by the Rev. Bill Roark, pastor.

Described as being "in an interdenominational spirit," it will feature evangelist Rev. O. R. Tessaro as speaker. Also appearing will be soprano and recording artist from Orlando, Fla., Vivian Welsh; Orian Osburn from Wessington Springs, South Dakota, blind organist, and song evangelists Dave and Diane Bonner of Seattle, Washington.

Services will be held on weekdays at 7:30 p.m., and on Sundays at 2:45 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Background

Rev. Tessaro has been an evangelist for 18 years. A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., he was a successful salesman at the time of his conversion. He began in the ministry by giving his testimony around Pittsburgh until he finally entered the evangelistic field full time.

He returned recently from crusades in England, Ireland, and Wales, and completed a crusade in the New England states. He specializes in conducting large crusades, and will leave for crusades in South America after the crusade in West Monroe is concluded.

Rev. Tessaro will present a number of subjects, ranging from "Hands Full of Honey," "Does God Heal Today," how he was healed of stammering, how his life was spared in a train-auto accident, and how he was converted.

Pageant Marks 2 Anniversaries

Two important Mormon anniversaries were marked recently near Palmyra, New York in the spectacular religious music-drama, the Hill Cumorah Pageant, presented by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Church officials said that this is the 145th anniversary of the very beginning of the dramatic Mormon history — the year 1820 that Joseph Smith knelt in prayer in the Sacred Grove and saw this first vision of the Lord and Jesus Christ. After three years, he was led to the burial place of the golden plates of the Book of Mormon on Hill Cumorah.

It also is the 135th anniversary of the year — 1830 — that Joseph Smith, on the basis of the Book of Mormon and other revelations, founded the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter - day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon Church.

Details Discussed

Dr. Harold I. Hansen, director of the Pageant since its beginning in 1937, discussed some of the details of the 1965 production, in an interview in Provo, Utah, where he is chairman of the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts at Brigham Young University.

"During the past winter we completely re-designed and rebuilt the sets, in our shop here at the University." Dr. Hansen said. "They are more elaborate, more massive, more dramatic.

"We also re-designed some of the major costumes to make them respond more effectively to the lighting changes.

"The lighting was enhanced this year by additional footlights and some other technical improvements calculated to give an even more startling aspect to our water curtains. We have five miles of underground wiring for both light and sound."

The pageant this year was titled, "America's Witness For Christ."

Guest Speaker

Guest speaker at the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe at 11 a.m. services today will be the Rev. Ernest Holloway, former pastor of the church.

Work on the church building was started in August, 1963, and the first service was held in the new structure August 16, 1964. Monday evening at 7:15, a revival series will start, with the Rev. Elvin Wheelis of Monroe, pastor of Mount Olive Baptist Church, serving as evangelist. Services will be held nightly through Sunday, August 22. Singing will be directed by the Rev. Fred Cheek, present supply pastor at Emmanuel Baptist Church of West Monroe.

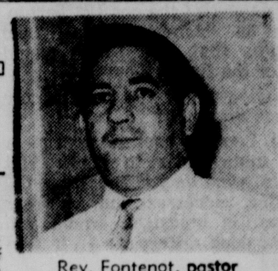
The Pastor's Corner

THE GREAT "MUST" OF THE BIBLE

Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of Heaven. John 3:3



Rev. Fontenot, pastor
Liberty Baptist Church, West Monroe

John 3:3 — Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of Heaven.

When we look at this man that came to Jesus by night, Nicodemus by name, we do not see him as a vile, wicked person, but a teacher of the Jewish law. Yet we hear Jesus as He tells this good man, "Ye must be born again."

As Jesus looks at mankind today His message is the same to all, "Ye must be born again."

Standards

By man's standards there are men that are good. Many have by their knowledge and skill done much for their city and fellow citizens, and this can be admired and appreciated. Many have obtained great power and prestige in the field of politics and in society, and this may be admired in one's life.

We find from the verse of scripture that we just read that all mankind, regardless of birth, rank, station, or riches, must be born again.

The Word of God tells us in Romans 3:10, "As it is written, there is none righteous, no, not one."

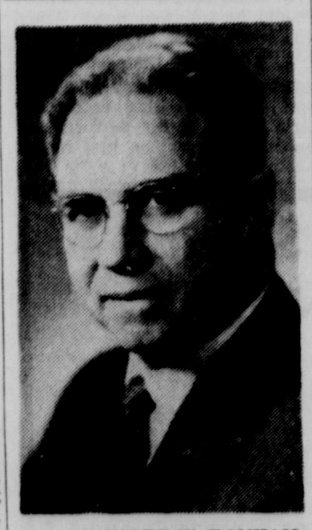
Sinners

Again in Romans 3:23, we find, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The Bible tells us in Romans 6:23. "For the wages of sin is death," but it also offers a great gift, "eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

We find in Romans 5:8, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us.

We thank God that even though we have no hope regardless of our birth, rank or station in life, we, too, can experience this New Birth, by placing our faith in Jesus Christ.

Repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ bring about this New Birth. May I admonish your hearts to place your faith in Jesus Christ today, for the Bible tells us, "Today is the day of salvation." Cor. 6:2.



DR. KENNETH W. BONHAM,

a medical missionary who has been serving in India for the Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ), will deliver the 10 a.m. sermon today at First Christian Church of Monroe, 401 St. John.

Group Gives Reports On Church Gain

The Rev. Tom Hale, pastor, and four of the members of the First Southern Methodist Church of Monroe represented the congregation at the Annual Mid-South Conference of pastors and laymen in Nashville. Tennessee, August 5 through 8. From Monroe, in addition to Rev. Hale, were the Rev. Amos Price, Mrs. A. E. Price, Mrs. E. R. Timmerman, and Mrs. Tom Hale.

Achievements

The local delegation was able to present at the conference an impressive record of church progress. It was reported that the Monroe Church was only one member short of a 100 per cent increase in membership. The Mid - South Conference of the Southern Methodist Church reported 22 new churches and also 100 per cent increase in members during the last conference year.

Organization

The Southern Methodist denomination was organized in South Carolina in 1939 by members of the former Methodist Church, South, and it is doctrinally and spiritually the same as that Church.

A complete program of services is held at Enaut Hall, 400 Jackson Street, with Sunday School at 9:45 a.m., and morning worship at 11. In addition there is an evening program, midweek prayer service, and choir practice.

MAXWELL D. Taylor, retiring Ambassador to Viet Nam, and former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has outlined his views on the Viet Nam war in written reply to questions from The Associated Press. (AP Wirephoto)

Taylor's Opinion On Viet Situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maxwell D. Taylor listed today the development of a four-point strategy for conducting the Viet Nam war as the most important gain during his year as ambassador to Saigon.

The most important shortcoming, he says, is the continuing lack of a stable central government for South Viet Nam.

Taylor foresees success if the four-point plan is unswervingly pursued and an agreed settlement of the war after the Reds are convinced they cannot win. But he declines to predict specifically when this would happen.

The retiring ambassador and former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff outlined his views in written reply to questions from The Associated Press.

Reasons

He lists reasons for the increased U.S. military role, sees no danger of the conflict becoming an "American war" and doubts that Red China would enter the fight all-out.

Following is the text of the interview:

Q. Looking back on your year as ambassador to South Viet Nam, what do you regard as the major successes and failures? What, in hindsight, would you have done differently — if anything?

A. Looking back over the last year in South Viet Nam I find the record marked with both gains and losses, pluses and minuses. Probably the most important gain was the development and adoption of the current strategy for the conduct of the war against the Viet Cong and Hanoi. That strategy consists of four elements:

First, a maximum effort within South Viet Nam to defeat and destroy the Viet Cong units in the field and thus deprive the Communist leaders in Hanoi of any hope of a military victory in South Viet Nam.

The second element consists of the joint Viet Nam-U.S. air campaign against military targets in North Viet Nam for the purpose of restricting the infiltration of men and arms into South Viet Nam and of reminding the Hanoi leaders of the growing cost of their participation in the Viet Cong aggression.

The third element of our strategy is the patient continuation of our efforts to strengthen the government and economy of South Viet Nam to insure against the internal collapse which is another of the hopes of Hanoi.

Finally, while pursuing these courses of action, we maintain an attitude of readiness to talk sincerely seeking an honorable settlement.

I consider that these four points constitute a sound strategy which, if adhered to without swerving, has a good chance of achieving U.S. and Vietnamese objectives.

A second major development has been the decision to broaden and deepen the U.S. commitment to South Viet Nam. This augmentation of our effort was announced by President Johnson on July 28 when he reported his intention to increase our military force to about 125,000. This decision was hailed with deep enthusiasm in South Viet Nam and must have made an equally deep impression on the Communist leaders in the North.

Other favorable developments which I might mention would include a continuity of anti-Communist policy in Saigon in spite of numerous changes in government, the increased participation of third countries (now 38 in number in support of South Viet Nam), success in controlling inflation under highly unfavorable economic conditions, and the achievement of a tightly unified U.S. effort on the part of American agencies in South Viet Nam.

Negative Side

On the negative side of the ledger I would put at the top of the list the continuing uncertainty as to the stability of the central government in Saigon. Efforts to obtain stability have been plagued too far by divisive tendencies among the people arising from differences of race, religion, culture and region.

In the absence of a stable and efficient government little progress has been made in rural reconstruction, and, in many provinces, there has been actual retrogression.

In the conduct of war the primary deficiency remains a shortage of trained manpower to cope with the ever-increasing strength of the Viet Cong. It is primarily to reduce this manpower deficiency that we are now responding to the request of the South Vietnamese government to introduce additional U.S. ground forces.

Q. Do you agree with Secretary (of Defense Robert S.) McNamara that there has been a "deterioration" in the situation? Why?

A. I believe that Secretary McNamara was referring to deterioration in the security situation, particularly in the northern provinces of South Viet Nam. I would agree that deterioration has occurred in those areas where the Viet Cong have massed their forces and taken advantage of a local superiority of numbers.

Taking into account nationwide statistics, the deterioration has not been dramatic in terms of population loss to government control. During the last year, according to our best figures, population under government control has dropped 7 per cent to 52 per cent of the entire population. About 23 per cent of the population is clearly under Viet Cong control, with the remainder living in disputed areas.

Q. What course do you believe should be followed now? Would you recommend any changes?

A. I believe that we should continue on our present course and keep on doing essentially striving for better performance on our part and on that of our Vietnamese allies.

Guide To Good Reading

Two Weeks Left Of Vacation Here

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

There are two weeks left of the summer vacation period. If you have not had time to do some interesting reading this summer. New books added during the past week offer a great variety of material. "The (Diblos) Notebook" by James Merrill is a novel which sparkles with poetic dialogue and description and is full of a wry humor which is alternately sophisticated and mocking. This is a book for the discriminating reader and one that you will not want to miss. "One Day" by Morris Wright is a panoramic novel covering the events of November 22, 1963, the day that President Kennedy was assassinated. This book is recommended for mature readers. A light but interesting novel is "Three For A Wedding" by Patte Wheat Mahan. For readers of mystery stories there are two new titles; "The Jealous One" by Celia Fremlin and "The Willow Pattern" by Robert Gulik.

There are some very significant new books in the nonfiction field. "The Future" by Theodore J. Gordon is a pertinent commentary on present day civilization. "People or Personnel" by Paul Goodman is a plea for decentralization and the return to individual identity. We hear much today about school dropouts and Lucius F. Cervantes has given us a cogent appraisal of the causes and the cures for this type of failure. An excellent discussion of current U. S. economic policy is "Breakthrough To The Great Society" written by David Cushman Coyle. A new book in the field of anthropology is "Peoples of Africa" by James L. Gibbs. The Life Nature Library is a very beautiful series of books and the latest one is called "Land and People of North America." For the person interested in making lovely objects with shells, there is a new book, "Shell Art" written by Helen K. Krauss.

People in the communications industry will want to see "Modern Broadcaster" written by Sherman P. Lawton. The loveliest cookbook that we have had in a very long time is "A Treasury of Great Recipes" compiled by Mary Vincent Price. This book was added to our collection as a memorial book, or we would not have it, for it is strickly a luxury item. Dr. Benjamin Spock has written another useful book for parents. It is "Caring for your Disabled Child" and will be invaluable to those who need it.

There are several interesting books in the literature collection. "The Suspended Drawing Room" is a collection of essays by S. N. Behram. "A Rose By Any Name" by Gertrude C. Ford is a work which purports to prove that Shakespeare's plays were really written by Edward De Vere the Earl of Oxford. "Experiments in Life" by Bernard J. Paris is an evaluation of the work of George Eliot. History students will find that "A Baronial Household Of The Thirteenth Century" written by Margaret Labarge contains much new and pertinent information about medieval life. David Dodge, who has written "The Poor Man's Guides" to various places has a new title called "The Poor Man's Guide To The Orient". If you are planning a trip to the Far East, be sure to see this first.

One of the most popular series of books in the Library is called "The Rivers of America Series" we have a new title in this group, which reaches the high standard of the others. It is "The St. Croix; Midwest Border River" written by James Taylor Dunn. An interesting biography is "The Mountbattens; the last Royal Success Story" written by Alden Hatch, who has done so many other accounts of the British Royal family.

Two interesting additions to the genealogy collection are concerned with Old Louisiana families. One is "An Attempt to Re-Assemble the Old Settlers in Family Groups" by Sidney A. Marchand and the other is "The Crew and Passenger Registration Lists of the 7 Acdian Expeditions of 1785" by Milton P. Rieder.

A new series of books for readers whose eyesight is not as good as it once was is being published by Franklin Watts and is called "Keith Jennison Books."

Patchwork Of Episodes 'Baffling'

THE PEACOCK'S TAIL. By Edward Hoagland. McGraw-Hill. $5.50.

Only the literary set may be able to make anything of this patchwork of episodes, which resemble a half dozen disconnected short stories of the sort that appear in the little magazines.

Since this is only a deminovel, perhaps the irregular thread of narrative is unimportant. Such as it is, it deals with a young man named Ben Pringle, who has been fired and jilted on the same day.

He takes refuge in a slummy "hotel" inhabited mostly by fecund Negroes and fecund Puerto Ricans. He pesters some of his former friends with telephone calls and visits, moping. He slops around with some aging derelicts. He tells fables to swarms of grotesque children in the slum ant-heap. For lack of a climax, the book ends with Ben piping a few hundred of these irrational children on a parade through the city.

Granted that the story doesn't count, the point seems to be that the author is demonstrating what a gifted writer he is. He is grimly determined to demonstrate it in every sentence, each of which contains at least one hot verb, a glaring image, a wild metaphor and an elliptical extravagance. At one point, Ben's legs" were popcorn popping; were like internal insomnia." At another, "The pigeons on the sidewalk doubled the color and go of the people because they made twice as many."

Hoagland tries awfully hard to put sounds, sights, thoughts, feelings, smells, wishes and emotions into fresh words. He tries too hard, and although his experimentation sometimes creates a strong effect, too often he only baffles the reader. Some day when he has learned to throw in — occasionally, at least — a simple, declarative sentence, he may write a real novel.

Cool Hand Luke Telling Portrayal

COOL HAND LUKE. By Donn Pearce. Scribners. $4.95.

Its setting and subject matter are grim and crude, and its hero is one of the devil's own, but Pearce's novel is a telling portrayal of a rebellious man's refusal to submit to the fate he has brought upon himself.

It is a story about a Florida road gang, narrated by one of the prisoners.

One of the new arrivals at the forbidding prison camp is Luke, a former war hero sentenced to hard labor for a drunken foray. Luke soon makes himself a major figure among the tough characters of the road gang. He outperforms them at gruelling jobs. He beats them at poker. He wins their admiration by his stubborn contempt for the harsh rules of the camp. He always "plays it real cool."

Gradually it comes out that Luke is mad at God Himself, mainly as the result of the horrors and butchery he saw in the war as a decorated combat man.

Luke outwits the guards and escapes, but soon is picked up in another state — and the brutality begins. Defiantly Luke escapes again, is captured, and the prison officials double their brutality. The other prisoners revel in his refusal to be broken. But Luke goes too far, and inevitable fate brings about his end.

To the lawbreakers, this man's unreasoning defiance makes him a hero. The author leaves it at that, without underlining the point that if Luke had been as cool as he pretended to be, he would have served his original term — despite the harsh discipline — and had his freedom.

This is a first novel, with its quota of flaws, but it is marked by some powerful writing and virile perceptions, pouring from a number of stirring, realistic scenes and rugged episodes.

Bird's Life Narrated In Vivid Fashion

THE GOLDEN EAGLE. By Robert Murphy. Dutton. $3.95.

Murphy's vivid prose delineates the life of a young eagle, Kira, with such feeling and intensity that before the book is ended the reader has virtually identified himself with the golden bird.

In this respect, his narrative is like that of his previous book, "The Peregrine Falcon." He tells of Kira's sudden need to try her wings, and to learn to fly. He describes her first lesson in hunting, her wanderings, her encounters with man - made and natural dangers.

At the same time — as he did in his first book, "The Pond" — he gives a naturalist's complete background of the environment; in this case it is the continental spine of the Rocky Mountains. There is a glimpse of a band of bighorns and a memorable scene of a mountain lion stalking an elk.

Murphy emphasizes that the eagle's greatest enemy is man. Kira escapes a pair of hunters who kill her father; she is caught in an abandoned cabin by an old miner; she is nearly shot by a pair of boys; she is missed by a hunter who shoots a companion eagle from a plane; but finally she is destroyed in another way.

John Schoenherr's drawings illustrate well this beautifully written story.

Century's Court Jester Memoirs

THE MEMOIRS OF AN AMNESIAC. By Oscar Levant. Putnam. $5.95.

If there had been an index for this book, it would have been jammed with names—all celebrities, both famous and notorious, from classical music, Tin Pan Alley, radio, television, Broadway, Hollywood, gangland and publishing.

Levant has been an adult prodigy for 40 years or so, a phenomenon of the footlights, neon lights and electronics, whose stock in trade varied from concertos to verbal upsmanship, from grim anecdotes of egocentric grandiosity to the forked - tongue nastiness that once was fashionable in the In-groups of his day.

He also has been a hypochondriac and a nuerotic, who for many of his recent years has gulped pills, inhabited psychiatric wards and tried to overcome his superstitious compulsions.

...t Festival Set or October 9-10

COLUMBIA (Special) — The 10th annual Louisiana Art and Folk Festival has been set for October 9-10 at the Caldwell Parish Community Center grounds near Columbia, according to Cameron C. Minard, president.

This is the largest of its kind in the state, and features art, craft, needlework, writing and performing arts show for artists and craftsmen of all ages and experiences.

Last year the festival honored the parishes' favorite family, Gov. and Mrs. John J. McKeithen and children, and attracted 7000 viewers and participants.

For the past nine years the art festival was sponsored by the Caldwell Parish Library and was for one day. But early this year the festival was incorporated state-wide as the Louisiana Art and Folk Festival, and will be sponsored this year by this non-profit organization.

Mrs. O. N. Reynolds, chairman, Mrs. W. M. Causey, co-chairman, and Mrs. H. H. Winters, folk chairman, announce the theme for this year's festival will be "My Favorite Thing" which will include not only those who can create, but those who enjoy collecting.

Planning the program which runs concurrently with the outdoor show will be Joe Barry Mullins of Northeast State College and Duchein Cazedessus of Louisiana Tech.

Co-ordinating the overall activities will be Mrs. John Crump and her committee. Mrs. Robert Meredith of Columbia will be co-ordinating chairman for Saturday, Oct. 9 and Mrs. George Cotton of Winnsboro and Miss Mary Moore Mitchell of Rayville will be co-chairman for Sunday afternoon, Oct. 10.

Miss Lillian Tarver, chairman of the flower show sponsored by the Caldwell Parish Garden Club which is a division of the festival announces the theme for '65, "Joyful Days in Caldwell." Their first show last year won one of the highest awards for an accredited show.

'Insider' Disputes Another 'Insider'

NEW YORK (UPI)—One former presidential "insider" criticized another former White House "insider" Friday for writing that a current "insider" was once on the brink of being tossed outside.

Former presidential aide Theodore Sorensen censured historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., for writing that the late President John F. Kennedy had planned to ask for Secretary of State Dean Rusk's resignation after the 1964 election.

"It is not in the national interest to destroy a man's influence and usefulness," Sorensen said at a news conference called to publicize his own reminiscence of the Kennedy administration, "Kennedy".

Schlesinger, whose memoirs of his association with the Kennedy administration, "1,000 Days", has had to share the spotlight with Sorensen's book, wrote that Kennedy soon despared of getting any imaginative thinking from the State Department, which he termed "a bowl of jelly."

This indictment, according to the former Harvard professor, extended to Rusk, whom Kennedy thought to be an excellent diplomatic technician but a poor leader.

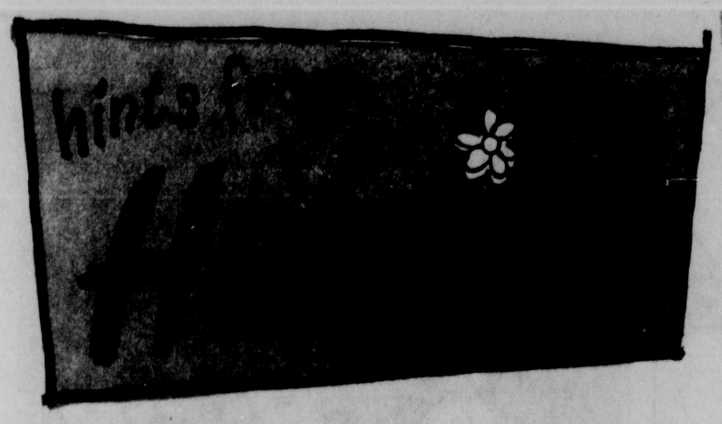
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS



DEAR HELOISE:

My husband made booster seats for our children's regular use on our dining room chairs.

He cut a piece of plywood the same size and shape as our chair seats, attached four blocks of wood about three or four inches high.

He padded the top of the board with a piece of foam, then we covered these booster seats with the same material with which we had covered our chairs.

When not in use, the "boosters" are hardly noticeable.

When you must use a book or two to boost a young child to the table, put a plastic place mat over them (preferably one with a backing so the child won't slip).

Any accidental spills or the inevitable crumbs won't mar the books.

Jackie Schmidt

TOO MUCH DOUGH?

DEAR HELOISE:

When making cupcakes, I ran out of the regular cupcake holders, and so decided to improvise.

I used aluminum foil, cutting pieces six by seven inches, and laid each piece in a muffin tin, molding the foil into the tin. I then cut off the excess foil around the edge. The foil made excellent cupcake holders.

Try it sometime, Heloise. It really works.

Patricia Lantz

BACON FOR ALL

DEAR HELOISE:

When I fry bacon, I fold each slice in half and fry it on both sides. Since bacon shrinks as it cooks, there is room in the skillet for the slices to be straightened out when I open the slices and fry them on the opposite side.

Mrs. A. R. B.

THAT LAST STEP

DEAR HELOISE:

To enjoy a no-bruise stepladder, I nail a thin strip of sponge rubber to the front and back edges of the top step.

This eliminates not only marks on the wall when the ladder is pushed against it, but prevents bruised shins, too.

Aunty Mayme

SLICE BY SLICE

DEAR HELOISE:

Try taking a piece of plain old thread from your sewing box and cutting that block of cheese:

If you pull the thread tight enough, it works like a charm.

Charles H.

PATTERNS NEED CARE

DEAR HELOISE:

If a pattern gets wrinkled or has been folded too long, it can be pressed on the ironing board just like a piece of material.

Don't have the iron too hot.

Also, if you use a piece of waxed paper as a pressing cloth, it gives the pattern more body, and it folds more easily.

Regular Reader

REINFORCED PATTERNS

DEAR HELOISE:

Since so many women sew today, I would like to tell them about my discovery:

I find that my pattern will not tear (while folding it from one end to the other when cutting space is not large enough) if I put a piece of tape on the portions of the pattern where I usually pin it to the material.

The tape should not be removed from the paper pattern after one has finished cutting out the garment, because the pattern will tear. Also it will be in place the next time you use the pattern.

RX FROM AN M.D.

DEAR HELOISE:

As a rarely-in-the-kitchen bachelor, I have a suggestion:

Don't throw away used aluminum foil. When wadded or crushed together, they make very effective scouring pads for pans and casseroles.

I discovered this after burning a pot of beans (a typical bachelor mishap) and not having any steel wool on hand.

With the aid of a little soap, the wad of aluminum foil works quite well.

Carl Biggers, M.D.

If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. 8-15

CONCENTRATED ICE PACK

DEAR HELOISE:

If one of my children falls and gets a big bump, rather than using dripping and inconvenient ice cubes to reduce swelling, I have found that a can of frozen juice wrapped in a wash cloth takes care of the situation with no mess at all, and takes less time than getting out ice cubes.

Barbara Britt

NAIL POLISH TOPS

DEAR HELOISE:

My father, of all people, taught me this trick.

He told me that when I open a new bottle of nail polish I should apply a bit of cold cream along the outside rim of the bottle. Then when I re-open the bottle the top will come off very easily—never sticks.

S. W.

DISHWASHING DUET

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is one on dishwashing:

When you have a large family get-together and you want to wash dishes in a hurry, try my system:

If you have a double sink, get two people to wash the dishes, one at each sink, instead of just one person doing it all.

The job will be cut in half.

Speedy

If you do not have a double sink, put soap and hot water in the sink, then put a pan or tub of hot water on the drainboard.

Believe me, Speedy was really speedy when she wrote us this one.

Besides, there is laughter in the kitchen . . . and as she said, the chore is finished twice as fast.

Heloise

A LID-DLE HINT

DEAR HELOISE:

I cut a square (slightly larger than the lid of a mason jar) from a worn-out bathing cap, and I keep this in the kitchen for a handy lid-gripper for opening bottles.

We haven't found anything to beat it, and it's so handy.
